

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25
26

STANDARD FOR MOTION TO DISMISS

Defendants move to dismiss plaintiffs' claims under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. A Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal is proper only where there is either a "lack of a cognizable legal theory" or "the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory." Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dept., 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1988). In considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, a court must accept as true all material allegations in the complaint, as well as reasonable inferences to be drawn from them. However, a court need not accept as true unreasonable inferences, unwarranted deductions of fact, or conclusory legal allegations cast in the form of factual allegations. See e.g. Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro v. Lerner, 31 F.3d 924, 928 (9th Cir. 1994) (internal quotation omitted).

RICO CLAIMS

COUNT 1 - VIOLATION OF AND CONSPIRACY TO VIOLATE § 1962(c)
COUNT 2 - VIOLATION OF AND CONSPIRACY TO VIOLATE § 1962(a)

Defendants move to dismiss the RICO claims on the following grounds: (1) plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged the existence of RICO enterprises, (2) plaintiffs have not alleged injuries that confer standing under RICO; and (3) plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged the retailer defendants' participation in the conduct of the affairs of an enterprise.¹

Existence of RICO enterprises

Plaintiffs' RICO claims under 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c) are based on violations of RICO §1962(a) and (c). To allege violations of §1962(a) and (c), plaintiffs must sufficiently allege the existence of an enterprise. See United States v. Cauble, 706 F.2d 1322, 1331 (5th Cir. 1983). An

¹

The parties are familiar with the facts, allegations, and legal arguments in this case. The court states only those which are necessary to explain its decision.

1 “‘enterprise’ includes any individual, partnership, corporation, association, or other legal entity,
2 and any union or group of individuals associated in fact although not a legal entity.” 18 U.S.C. §
3 1961(4). Defendants contend that plaintiffs have not adequately alleged the existence of a RICO
4 enterprise.

5
6 Plaintiffs allege two types of RICO enterprises: (1) many separate enterprises consisting 7 of a single retailer defendant associated in fact with a single manufacturer defendant, and (2) one 8 enterprise consisting of all retailer defendants associated in fact with all manufacturer defendants.
9 Plaintiffs allege that the various association-in-fact enterprises were formed for the purpose of 10 committing numerous acts of racketeering activity.

11
12 Association-in-fact enterprises consisting of individual retailer defendants and individual manufacturer defendants have been adequately alleged.

13 In United States v. Turkette, 452 U.S. 576, 582-583 and n.4, 101 S.Ct. 2524, 2528 and n.4
14 (1981), the Supreme Court stated that an association-in-fact enterprise is a group of persons
15 associated for the common purpose of engaging in a course of conduct and that such associations 16 may exist for entirely legitimate purposes. The Court stated the existence of an association-in-17 fact enterprise is proved by evidence of (1) an ongoing formal or informal organization, (2) 18 evidence that the various associates function as a continuing unit, and (3) evidence showing that 19 the enterprise exists separately from the pattern of racketeering activities. See id.

20
21 In Chang v. Chen, 80 F.3d 1293, 1299 (9th Cir. 1996), the Ninth Circuit elaborated on the 22 three enterprise elements, quoting extensively from the Third Circuit’s opinion in United States
23 v. Riccobene, 709 F.2d 214 (3rd Cir. 1983). In Riccobene, a criminal prosecution, the court stated 24 “[t]he ‘ongoing organization’ requirement relates to the superstructure or framework of the 25 group. To satisfy this first element, the government must show that some sort of structure exists 26

1 within the group for the making of decisions, whether it be hierarchical or consensual. There
2 must be some mechanism for controlling and directing the affairs of the group on an ongoing,
3 rather than an ad hoc, basis.” Id. at 222. As to the second requirement, that the associates
4 function as a continuing unit, the Riccobene court stated “[t]his does not mean that individuals
5 cannot leave the group or that new members cannot join at a later time. It does require, however, 6 that each person perform a role in the group consistent with the organizational structure . . . and 7 which furthers the activities of the organization.” Id. at 223.²

9 As to the third Riccobene requirement, that the enterprise exist separately from the pattern 10 of racketeering activities, the court stated “[a]s we understand this last requirement, it is not 11 necessary to show that the enterprise has some function wholly unrelated to the racketeering 12 activity, but rather that it has an existence beyond that which is necessary merely to commit each 13 of the acts charged as predicate racketeering offenses. The function of overseeing and 14 coordinating the commission of several different predicate offenses and other activities on an 15 ongoing basis is adequate to satisfy the separate existence requirement” Id. at 223-24.

17 The Ninth Circuit has stated that “the involvement of a corporation, which has an 18

19 _____
20 2

21 In United States v. Feldman, 853 F.2d 648, 657 (9th Cir. 1988), the Ninth Circuit
22 addressed these two elements as they specifically relate to an association-in-fact enterprise
23 consisting, as here, mostly of corporations. The Ninth Circuit stated that a court must look 24 carefully at the facts alleged to determine if there are sufficient interconnections among the 25 associates to constitute an enterprise. See id. at 657-58. Such interconnections may be a parent-26 subsidiary relationship, similar or related business purposes, shared assets, and overlapping officers and personnel. See id. The court noted that where the “associates” in the enterprise are also all RICO defendants under a charge of conspiracy, the allegations supporting the conspiracy also lend support to both the existence of an ongoing organization and the “continuity” requirement. See id. The court also stated that the requirement of continuity of personnel is not absolute and the “determinative factor is whether the associational ties of those charged with a RICO violation amount to an organizational pattern or system of authority.” Id. at 659.

1 existence separate from its participation in the racketeering activity, can satisfy the enterprise
2 element's requirement of a separate structure." Chang, 80 F.3d at 1300. Plaintiffs have 3 sufficiently alleged that these single retailer-single manufacturer corporate enterprises had an 4 existence separate from the racketeering activities because "[t]he corporate entities had a legal 5 existence separate from their participation in the racketeering, and the very existence of a 6 corporation meets the requirement for a separate structure." Feldman, 853 F.2d at 660.

8 Plaintiffs also contend that the existence of association-in-fact enterprises consisting of a 9 single retailer defendant and a single manufacturer defendant is sufficiently established through 10 their allegations of various contracts and agreements between single retailers and single 11 manufacturers and allegations of a course of conduct that gave the individual retailer defendant 12 some means of joint control and participation in the operations of individual garment factories.
13 The alleged agreements and conduct includes purchase agreements, vendor codes of conduct, on-14 site quality control monitoring by retailers, vendor compliance monitoring, and the setting of 15 quality standards and turn-around times. Plaintiffs maintain that the alleged agreements and 16 conduct are sufficient to show a structure for the individual retailer-individual manufacturer 17 enterprises, and an available mechanism for decision-making and direction of the affairs of the 18 enterprise.³ See Loma Linda Univ. Med. Ctr., Inc. v. Farmers Group, Inc., Civ-S-94-

21 3

22 Both plaintiffs and defendants rely on River City Markets, Inc. v. Fleming Foods West,
23 Inc., 960 F.2d 1458, 1461-62 (9th Cir. 1992). Plaintiffs argue River City supports their position
24 that commercial contractual relationships can serve as the structure for the RICO enterprise;
25 defendants argue that River City stands for the proposition that where a contract shows nothing in 26 its terms that would violate any federally protected rights if carried out, and there are no allegations that the agreement contemplated or permitted a course of conduct that would involve misconduct, the contracts are not sufficient to allege the existence of a RICO enterprise. The court in River City found that the commercial agreements between the associates in the enterprise created a business relationship akin to a joint venture and, in conjunction with the allegations that

1 0681 WBS/JFM, 1995 WL 363441 (F.D. Cal. May 15, 1995) (contractual relationships among 2 various entities can establish the organizational network establishing the RICO enterprise). The 3 court agrees that the allegations are sufficient. The relatedness of the individual retailer's and the 4 individual manufacturer's businesses, the allegations of collusion between individual retailers
5 and individual manufacturers to conceal factory conditions thereby permitting the garments to be 6 promoted as "sweat" free (FAC ¶ 101), and the alleged longevity of the relationships support the 7 existence of the alleged enterprises and are sufficient to allege that the individual retailers and 8 individual manufacturers functioned as continuing units.
9

10 For the foregoing reasons, the court concludes that plaintiffs have adequately alleged the 11 existence of the various single retailer-single manufacturer RICO enterprises.
12

13 Association-in-fact enterprise consisting of all retailer defendants and all manufacturer 14 defendants has not been sufficiently pleaded.

15 Plaintiffs have not adequately alleged the existence of an enterprise consisting of all
16 retailer defendants and all manufacturer defendants. Plaintiffs allege that many retailer
17 defendants contract with the same manufacturer defendants and many retailers use the same
18 vendor compliance monitors and contract brokers. Plaintiffs also allege that many manufacturer
19 defendants are commonly owned and all are members of the Saipan Garment Manufacturers 20

21 the individual defendants conducted their RICO activities through the enterprise, held the 22 complaint sufficient to allege the existence of a RICO enterprise and survive a motion to dismiss.
23 See id. at 1461. The court then examined the evidence to support those allegations in the context 24 of a motion for summary judgment and found that such routine business contracts, without 25 additional evidence showing the agreements were used for an improper purpose or permitted an 26 unlawful course of conduct, were insufficient to establish a RICO enterprise for summary judgment purposes. See id. at 1462-63. The alleged contractual relationships in this case, along with plaintiffs' allegations that the defendants conducted their 18 U.S.C. §§ 1581 and 1584 racketeering activities through the enterprises are sufficient to allege the existence of the enterprises at this stage of the litigation.

1 Association, where they exchange information and standardize workplace practices. Although 2 the allegations show common business purposes and interconnections through the utilization of 3 the same contract brokers, compliance monitors, and manufacturers, as well as interconnections 4 between certain of the manufacturers themselves, there are no allegations showing an 5 overarching structure and a mechanism for making decisions and directing or controlling the 6 affairs of all retailer defendants and manufacturer defendants as a group on an ongoing basis.
7 Accordingly, plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged an enterprise consisting of all retailer
8 defendants and all manufacturer defendants.
9

10 Injury to “property” is adequately pleaded.

11 Plaintiffs have standing to sue under RICO if---and can only recover damages to the 12 extent that---they have been injured in their business or property by conduct constituting a 13 violation of § 1962. See 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c);⁴ see also Sedima v. Imrex Co., Inc., 473 U.S. 479, 14 496, 105 S.Ct. 3275, 3285 (1985). Plaintiffs must allege a concrete financial loss to their 15 business or property proximately caused by defendants’ conduct. See Oscar v. Univ. Student Co-
16 op. Ass’n, 965 F.2d 783, 785 (9th Cir. 1992). Defendants contend plaintiffs have not alleged 17 injuries to their business or property.
18

19 Plaintiffs allege that the following injuries resulted from defendants’ conduct, and that the 20 injuries were to their “property” for RICO purposes: (1) lost wages resulting from forced 21 “volunteer” hours, (2) payment of excessive amounts for employer-provided food and housing, 22 and (3) payment of recruitment fees and deposits which contributed to their indentured status.
23

24 _____
25 ⁴

26 “Any person injured in his business or property by reason of a violation of section 1962 of this chapter may sue therefor in any appropriate United States district court . . .” 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).

1 1. Allegations of lost wages suffice to show an “injury to property” for RICO purposes.

2 Plaintiffs’ allegations of lost wages caused by the predicate acts of involuntary servitude, 3 18 U.S.C. § 1584, and peonage, 18 U.S.C. § 1581, (FAC ¶¶ 134, 135), show a concrete financial 4 loss suffered by plaintiffs; i.e. they show an injury to plaintiffs’ property for RICO purposes.⁵
5 Defendants rely upon and analogize to Danielsen v. Burnside-Ott Aviation Training Ctr., Inc.,
6 941 F.2d 1220 (D.C. Cir. 1991), wherein the plaintiffs/employees were mis-classified and as a
7 result received a lower wage rate. Danielsen is distinguishable from the allegations in this case
8 because plaintiffs there were being paid the wage specified in their contract, were not working
9 unpaid hours, and, in that court’s opinion, were attempting to turn a wage dispute into a RICO
10 action by tenuous allegations of mail and wire fraud. See id. at 1228-29. Here, plaintiffs allege 11 they are being forced to work for no pay as a result of defendants’ alleged scheme to place and 12 keep them in indentured status.
13

14
15 2. Allegations of excessive payments for employer-provided food and lodging suffice to 16 show an “injury to property” for RICO purposes.

17 Plaintiffs’ allegations of excessive payments for employer-provided food and housing are 18 sufficient to show an injury to property caused by the defendants’ alleged violations of RICO.
19 See Blue Cross & Blue Shield of New Jersey v. Philip Morris, Inc., 36 F.Supp. 2d 560, 569 (E.D.
20 N.Y. 1999) (expenditure of money as a result of defendants’ RICO activities, that would not have 21 been spent or would have been spent on other things, is an injury under RICO). The alleged 22

23
24 5

25 See e.g. Libertad v. Welch, 53 F.3d 428, 437 n.4 (1st Cir. 1995) (lost wages could be an 26 injury to property under RICO); Reynolds v. Condon, 908 F.Supp. 1494, 1519 (N.D. Iowa 1995)
 (loss of income may suffice to state a RICO injury); Rodonich v. House Wreckers Union Local 95 of Laborers’ Int’l Union, 627 F.Supp. 176, 180 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (“to the extent plaintiffs’ purported injuries consist of lost wages, sufficient proprietary damage is alleged”).

1 payments for food and housing are concrete financial losses and plaintiffs allege they are 2 required to make these payments, which are in excess of the defendants' actual costs, as part of 3 the scheme to keep plaintiffs in an indentured status. (FAC ¶¶ 8-9, 125). Plaintiffs do not have 4 to explicitly allege that the payments exceeded market value; that is reasonably inferred from the 5 allegations. (FAC ¶¶ 8,15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 22, 24).
6

7 3. Allegations of actual payment of recruitment fees suffice to show an "injury to 8 property" for RICO purposes; allegations that "deposits" may not be returned are 9 not sufficient to show an "injury to property" sufficient for RICO purposes.

10 Plaintiffs also adequately allege payment of the recruitment fees as an injury caused by 11 defendants' RICO violations. All plaintiffs allege they paid recruitment fees. (FAC ¶¶ 15-39).
12 Plaintiffs further allege that the imposition of fees by the recruiters (who actually are acting as 13 defendants' agents) are part of the scheme to place and keep them in an indentured servant
14 status.⁶ These allegations show a concrete financial loss. (FAC ¶¶ 121-122). Defendants cite 15 Dumas v. Major League Baseball Props., Inc., 104 F.Supp.2d 1220, 1223 (S.D. Cal. 2000), for 16

17 6

18 Defendants presented the affidavit of Yafeng Sun attesting that recruiting fees are 19 governed by and imposed as a matter of Chinese law. Defendants contend that the Court may 20 consider the affidavit because it was submitted on an issue of foreign law pursuant to FRCP 44.1.
21 Defendants note there is no allegation that the recruitment fees are in excess of that authorized by 22 the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Trade and Economic Cooperation and cite to the MOFTEC
23 regulations attached as an exhibit. Plaintiffs object to the affidavit as an evidentiary submission 24 and argue that even if recruitment fees were permitted under Chinese law, they have alleged they 25 are excessive and unlawful under American law. The FAC appears to raise an issue of foreign 26 law, but not with respect to recruitment fees. In support of the peonage and indentured servitude claims plaintiffs allege "Class members have been threatened by the Chinese government with deportation, arrest and prosecution in China if they speak unfavorably about their employers."
(FAC ¶ 119(e)). With respect to recruitment fees, plaintiffs only allege they are recruited by "private agencies" acting as agents of defendants. (FAC ¶ 121). Plaintiffs have alleged an injury based on their payment of recruitment fees sufficient to survive a motion to dismiss; however, the Rule 44.1 submissions regarding the nature of the recruitment fees may again be submitted in conjunction with any subsequent dispositive motion.

1 the proposition that there is no injury where plaintiffs voluntarily pay money and receive the 2 benefit of their bargain. The court in Dumas stated, however, that had plaintiffs alleged that 3 defendants' conduct was fraudulent or dishonest and that they did not receive the benefit of their 4 bargain as a result of that dishonesty, an injury under RICO may have been sufficiently pled. See
5 id. Plaintiffs here have alleged they did not get the benefit of their bargain based on the 6 defendants' alleged dishonest conduct; i.e. that the "recruiters" are actually in the service of the 7 defendants. (FAC ¶ 5-6).

9 However, the deposits plaintiffs allegedly made to the recruiters to ensure completion of 10 their contracts with defendants do not constitute a concrete financial loss because plaintiffs 11 acknowledge that the deposits will be returned to them upon completion of their contracts and 12 only speculate that the deposits may be lost. (FAC ¶ 119(a)). There are no allegations in the 13 FAC that plaintiffs have lost their deposits. See Lui Ciro, Inc. v. Ciro, Inc., 895 F.Supp. 1365, 14 1378 (D. Haw. 1995) (no RICO injury where alleged damages are contingent and not concrete).

16 Plaintiffs lack standing to seek injunctive relief under RICO.

17 Defendants argue that plaintiffs have no standing under RICO to seek injunctive relief
18 and that ¶¶ 176 and 181 of the FAC must therefore be stricken. Plaintiffs have offered no
19 counter argument. In Religious Tech. Ctr. v. Wollersheim, 796 F.2d 1076, 1088 (9th Cir. 1986), 20 the Ninth Circuit held that injunctive relief is not available to civil RICO plaintiffs. Accordingly, 21 ¶¶ 176 and 181 of the FAC are stricken.

23 For the foregoing reasons, the court concludes that plaintiffs have adequately alleged 24 injury to their property based on lost wages for unpaid work hours, excessive payments for 25 employer-provided food and housing, and payment of recruiting fees. However, the allegations 26 of non-return of "deposits" are too speculative. Plaintiffs may not seek injunctive relief under

1 RICO.

2 Plaintiffs have not alleged an “investment injury” under § 1962(a)

3 In order to state an “investment injury” claim based on a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 4 1962(a), plaintiffs must allege that the injury to their property resulted from defendants’ use or 5 investment of RICO proceeds. See Nugget Hydroelectric L.P. v. Pacific Gas & Elec., 981 F.2d
6 429, 437 (9th Cir. 1992) (standing to sue under § 1962(a) requires alleged injury in business or 7 property by the use or investment of the racketeering income).⁷ Defendants contend that 8 plaintiffs have failed to allege a use or investment injury.
9

10 In count two of the FAC plaintiffs allege that “defendants conspired to derive, and did 11 derive, substantial proceeds through the above-described pattern of racketeering activity and 12 conspired to use or invest, and used or invested, such proceeds in the operation of the 13 association-in-fact enterprises.” (FAC ¶ 179). In ¶ 180 plaintiffs allege “[a]s a direct and 14 proximate result of defendants’ violations of § 1962(a) and (d) of RICO, plaintiffs and the 15 members of the Class have been injured in their business or property.”
16

17 The FAC contains no allegations, other than the aforementioned conclusory paragraphs, 18 that allege or reasonably give rise to an inference that defendants used or invested alleged 19 racketeering proceeds in the establishment or operation of any enterprise. Even taking these 20 use/investment allegations as true, plaintiffs’ factual allegations of injury are not sufficient to 21 show an injury resulting from such use or investment, as opposed to injuries caused by the 22 predicate acts. See U.S. Concord, Inc. v. Harris Graphics Corp., 757 F.Supp. 1053, 1060 (N.D.
23

24 _____
25 ⁷

26 An injury under 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a) resulting from use or investment of proceeds is different from an injury under 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c) resulting from the predicate acts. See Nugget Hydroelectric L.P. v. Pacific Gas & Elec., 981 F.2d 429, 437 (9th Cir. 1992).

1 Cal. 1991) (reinvestment in the RICO enterprise itself is insufficient where plaintiff sustained no
2 injury other than from the predicate acts themselves). Because plaintiffs have not properly
3 alleged an investment injury, they lack standing to assert a claim for violation of § 1962(a).

4 Plaintiffs' claim of a § 1962(d) conspiracy to violate § 1962(a) also fails because 5 plaintiffs have not alleged the requisite injury resulting from the conspiracy. See Beck v. Prupis, 6 120 S.Ct. 1608, 1616 n.9 (2000) ("a plaintiff suing for a violation of § 1962(d) based on an 7 agreement to violate § 1962(a) is required to allege injury from the 'use or invest[ment]' of 8 illicit proceeds."). Accordingly, plaintiffs have failed to sufficiently plead any claim based on 9 RICO § 1962(a) and count two is therefore dismissed as to all defendants.

11 Violation of criminal peonage statute and Hobbs Act are adequately alleged as "predicate 12 acts" supporting a "pattern of racketeering activity" under RICO.

13 Plaintiffs must allege a "pattern of racketeering activity" in order to state a claim based 14 on violation of RICO § 1962(a) or § 1962(c). A "pattern of racketeering activity" requires at 15 least two acts of racketeering." See 18 U.S.C. § 1961(5). Acts of racketeering include "any act 16 or threat involving murder, kidnaping, gambling, arson, robbery, bribery, extortion . . . which is 17 chargeable under State law and punishable by imprisonment for more than one year"⁸ and 18 specific enumerated offenses indictable under Title 18 of the United States Code, including 19 peonage and involuntary servitude. See 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1), § 1581, § 1584. Defendants 20 contend that plaintiffs have not adequately pleaded the predicate acts of racketeering.
21
22
23 24

25 8

26 Plaintiffs make no allegations of violations of CNMI criminal laws as "predicate acts."

1 1. Involuntary servitude and criminal peonage.

2 To establish the crime of involuntary servitude under 18 U.S.C. § 1584, a prosecutor
3 must allege and prove beyond a reasonable doubt the use or threatened use of physical restraint,
4 physical coercion or legal coercion to compel labor. See United States v. Kozminski, 487 U.S.
5 931, 952, 108 S.Ct. 2751, 2765 (1988).
6

7 To establish the crime of peonage under 18 U.S.C. § 1581, a prosecutor must allege and 8 prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the victim was “working for a debt which he owed the 9 [master], and [] the labor was performed under such coercion as to become compulsory service 10 for the discharge of the debt.” See United States v. Reynolds, 235 U.S. 133, 35 S.Ct. 86 (1914).
11

12 An actual conviction for the crime is not a condition precedent to the filing of a civil 13 lawsuit; plaintiffs need only allege two predicate acts that violated one or more of the federal 14 criminal laws enumerated in 18 U.S.C. § 1962(1). See, e.g., Schreiber Distributing v. Serv-Well 15 Furniture Co, 806 F.2d 1393, 1396-1401 (9th Cir. 1986).

16 As discussed infra, plaintiffs have not sufficiently pleaded a claim for involuntary 17 servitude but have adequately alleged that they were held in a condition of peonage based on 18 their recruitment fees and other debts through threats or use of physical or legal coercion.
19

20 2. The Hobbs Act

21 The Hobbs Act makes it a crime to interfere with commerce by use of extortion. See 18
22 U.S.C. § 1951(a). “[E]xtortion’ means the obtaining of property from another, with his consent, 23 induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under the color of 24 official right.” 18 U.S.C. § 1951(b)(2). To prove extortion by wrongful use of force or fear, it 25 must be established that “(1) the defendant induced someone to part with money, property, or 26

1 other valuable right by the wrongful use or threat of force or fear; (2) the defendant acted with 2 the intent to obtain money or property that defendant knew he was not entitled to receive; and (3) 3 commerce from one state to another was or would have been affected in some way.” United 4 States v. Dischner, 947 F.2d 1502, 1516 (9th Cir. 1992).

5
6 Plaintiffs contend they have been deprived of property in the form of unduly high 7 payments of money to defendants for substandard food and housing, recruitment fees, and 8 medical expenses, and that they have been penalized by defendants through being forced to work
9 unpaid “volunteer” hours.

10 Money is clearly “property” within the meaning of the Hobbs Act, and it can reasonably 11 be inferred from the allegations in the complaint that the manufacturer defendants, or their 12 agents, wrongfully coerced payment of fees for inadequate food and housing and recruiting fees, 13 and that these fees and payments were in some respect unlawful.

14
15 It cannot, however, be reasonably inferred from the allegations that payments for medical 16 expenses were coerced. Plaintiffs allege that the defendants provide in-house medical clinics and 17 if they choose to seek outside medical attention they must then pay for it. There is no allegation
18 that the defendants forced the plaintiffs to use the in-house medical services and in that manner
19 obtained money or property belonging to the plaintiffs. (FAC ¶ 127).

20
21 As to the “volunteer” hours, plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged that the unpaid work was 22 performed under threatened force, violence, or fear. It may be reasonably inferred from the 23 allegations that plaintiffs were essentially induced to part with their valuable right to 24 compensation for their labor by the wrongful use or threat of force or fear, and that the

1 manufacturer defendants acted with intent to deprive plaintiffs of money and to profit therefrom.⁹

2 There is no aiding and abetting liability under RICO and thus the court need not 3 decide whether the retailer defendants may nevertheless be liable where they 4 aided and abetted predicate acts.

5 The retailer defendants contend there is no aiding and abetting liability under RICO and 6 therefore they may not be held liable for either aiding and abetting a substantive RICO violation 7 or for aiding and abetting the predicate acts.

8 In Central Bank of Denver v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, 511 U.S. 164, 114 S.Ct.
9 1439 (1994), the Supreme Court held that there is no private cause of action for aiding and 10 abetting a securities violation under § 10(b) of the Securities and Exchange Act. Since the 11 Supreme Court's Central Bank decision, nearly every court that has considered the aiding and 12 abetting issue as applied to RICO has determined that there is no aiding and abetting liability 13 under RICO. Based on Central Bank, the court concludes plaintiffs cannot state a claim against 14 the retailer defendants based on a theory of aiding and abetting violations of RICO or allegations 15 that defendants aided and abetted the commission of predicate acts.
16
17 18 19 20

21 9

22 Defendants cite Toms v. Pizzo, 4 F.Supp.2d 178, 183 (W.D.N.Y. 1998), for the 23 proposition that "volunteer" labor is not a violation of the Hobbs Act. In Toms, the plaintiff, an 24 independent contractor, alleged that he was forced to perform more services than his contract 25 called for and that the defendants were using threats of economic interference to put him out of 26 business while acquiring his trade secrets. Toms is distinguishable from this case because, under the facts alleged in Toms, the court found Toms's claim essentially concerned the scope of his contractual obligations, and not the "volunteer" hours complained of here.

1 Plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged the retailer defendants' participation in,
2 or conduct of, the affairs of an enterprise.

3 In order to state a claim based on violation of RICO § 1962(c), plaintiffs must allege that 4 the defendants “(1) conduct (2) [the affairs] of an enterprise (3) through a pattern (4) of 5 racketeering activity.” Sedima, 473 U.S. at 496, 105 S.Ct. at 3285. “[T]he essence of the 6 violation is the commission of those [racketeering] acts in connection with the conduct of an
7 enterprise.” Id. at 497, 105 S.Ct. at 3285. In Reves v. Ernst & Young, 507 U.S. 170, 184, 113
8 S.Ct. 1163, 1170 (1993), the Supreme Court determined that participation in the conduct of the 9 affairs of the enterprise requires that the defendant have some part in the direction of the 10 enterprise. The Court stated it encompasses both upper level management as well as lower rung 11 participants who are under the direction of upper management, and that liability is also extended 12 to those “associated with” the enterprise who participate in the operation and management of the 13 enterprise’s affairs.¹⁰ See id. at 185, 113 S.Ct. at 1173. The retailer defendants contend plaintiffs 14 have failed to adequately allege their participation in the various enterprises.
15

16 As noted above, the allegations adequately show an opportunity for the retailer
17 defendants to participate in the enterprise. However, for the reasons given below, the allegations 18 purportedly showing that the retailer defendants actually did participate in the enterprise are 19

20 _____ 10

21 Plaintiffs argue the Reves test is not applicable here because that test only applies when 22 the person is outside the enterprise and not when the person is alleged to be part of the enterprise.
23 Reves interpreted what it means to conduct or participate in the conduct of the affairs of an 24 enterprise. See id. at 177, 113 S.Ct. at 1169. The Court’s ruling was not explicitly or implicitly
25 limited to persons outside the enterprise. In fact, the Court noted the test had equal applicability 26 to employees (insiders) of the enterprise as it did to those “associated with” (outsiders) the enterprise. See id. at 184-85, 113 S.Ct. at 1172-73. Accordingly, the Court finds the “operation and management” test in Reves is applicable to determine if plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged the retailer defendants’ participation in the enterprise.

1 insufficient to constitute the requisite "participation." See Comwest, Inc. v. American Operator
2 Services, Inc., 65 F.Supp. 1467, 1475 (C.D. Cal. 1991) (allegations of assisting with certain
3 aspects of the enterprise were not sufficient to suggest that the defendant had any actual control
4 over the enterprise's course of action).

5
6 In ¶ 11 of the FAC plaintiffs allege the retailer defendants knowingly or recklessly 7 participated in the enterprise and in ¶ 133 plaintiffs set forth the factual allegations which they 8 contend support the retailers' participation in the enterprise. Plaintiffs allege in section (a) of ¶ 9 133 that the retailer defendants have control over minimum wage, overtime policies, and 10 working conditions through monitoring and oversight of conditions but that they "apparently 11 acquiesce to such conditions." Generally, the cases seem to suggest that mere acquiescence to 12 conditions does not constitute "participation" in the conduct of the enterprise. See Cruse v.
13 Equitable Securities of New York, Inc., 678 F.Supp. 1023, 1034 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) ("non-action or 14 nonfeasance [] is not the active participation in racketeering activity required before plaintiff may 15 invoke the RICO statute"). Although Cruse was a securities case involving the duties of a stock 16 broker, it provides guidance here.

17
18 Sections (d), (f) and (g) of ¶ 133 allege that the retailer defendants impose substantial 19 economic pressure on the manufacturer defendants to violate wage and overtime provisions.
20 Alleged economic pressure generated under the terms of the contracts between retailers and 21 manufacturers, however, is not equivalent to participation in the enterprise. See, e.g., Morin v.
22 Trupin, 832 F.Supp. 93 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (substantial persuasive power to induce management to 23 take certain actions is not equivalent to having the power to conduct or participate in the conduct
24 of the enterprise's affairs). Morin involved a law firm that advised a corporation; again, the court
25
26

1 adopts its reasoning in the instant matter.

2 Section (e) of ¶ 133 alleges that the retailer defendants failed to exert their economic 3 leverage over the manufacturer defendants to control working conditions. A failure to act is not
4 participation in the conduct of an enterprise. See Reves, 507 U.S. at 185, 113 S.Ct. at 1173
5 (accounting firm's failure to act did not constitute participation in the conduct of the enterprise);
6 see also Kerr-McGee Corp. v. Ma-Ju Marine Services, Inc., 830 F.2d 1332, 1342 (5th Cir. 1987)
7 (failure to exert economic pressure did not give rise to liability under section 5(b) of the 8 Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act).

9
10 Paragraph 133, sections (b) and (c) allege that the retailer defendants have control over 11 the operational details and thus effectively supervise the production process through oversight 12 and quality control monitoring. This is the only affirmative conduct by the retailers which 13 plaintiffs have alleged; however, the allegation of quality control monitoring is insufficient to 14 give rise to an inference that the retailer defendants were directing the enterprise at some level 15 through a pattern of racketeering activities. See Comwest, 765 F.Supp. at 1475 (allegations that 16 defendant effectively controlled operations through assisting certain activities were not sufficient 17 to suggest defendant had any actual control or decision making authority over the affairs of the 18 enterprise).

19 20
21 Accordingly, and for the foregoing reasons, the court concludes that plaintiffs have not 22 sufficiently alleged the that retailer defendants participated in the conduct of the affairs of the 23 enterprises.¹¹

24
25 ¹¹

26 Plaintiffs also allege the retailers and the manufacturers are joint venturers and each others agents and in this manner are apparently attempting to impose liability vicariously upon

1 Plaintiffs have sufficiently pleaded a conspiracy under § 1962(d) to violate § 1962(c) but 2 have not sufficiently pleaded a conspiracy under § 1962(d) to violate § 1962(a).

3 Section 1962(d) provides that "[i]t shall be unlawful for any person to conspire to violate 4 any of the provisions of subsection (a), (b) or (c) of this section." 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d).

5 Defendants contend that because plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged RICO claims based on 6 violations of § 1962(a) ("use or investment") and (c) ("enterprise"), they cannot allege a 7 conspiracy to violate those sections under § 1962(d). See Simon v. Value Behavioral Health,
8 Inc., 208 F.3d 1073, 1084 (9th Cir. 2000) ("[F]ailure to plead the requisite elements of either a
9 Section 1962(a) or a Section 1962(c) violation implicitly means that he cannot plead a conspiracy 10 to violate either section.").

12 To state a claim for conspiracy under RICO, it must be alleged that the defendants knew 13 about and agreed to facilitate some criminal scheme, and the scheme, if completed, must 14 constitute a criminal offense under RICO. See Salinas v. United States, 522 U.S. 52, 63-64, 118
15 S.Ct. 469, 477-78 (1997); see also Howard v. America Online, 208 F.3d 741, 751 (9th Cir. 2000) 16 (a defendant must be aware of the essential nature and scope of the enterprise and agree to 17 participate in it). This requirement is satisfied where an agreement which is a substantive 18

19
20 the retailer defendants. See Brady v. Detry Fresh Products Co., 974 F.2d 1149, 1154 (9th Cir.
21 1992) (holding that "an employer that is benefitted by its employee or agent's violations of 22 section 1962(c) may be held liable under the doctrines of respondeat superior and agency when 23 the employer is distinct from the enterprise."). As discussed infra in the vicarious liability
24 analysis, plaintiffs have failed to adequately plead these relationships. Further, it appears that the 25 retailer defendants may not be held vicariously liable under § 1962(c) for the manufacturer 26 defendants' conduct on an agency theory because, as the purported "employer" of the manufacturer defendants, they not sufficiently distinct from the association-in-fact enterprise.
See Brady, 974 F.2d at 1154-55. To permit a "person" that is associated with an associate-infact enterprise to be held liable on an agency basis instead of finding liability based on the person's participation would seem to be inconsistent with § 1962(c) requirement that the "person" must participate in the enterprise in order to be held liable.

1 violation of RICO is alleged or it is alleged that the defendants agreed to commit or participate in 2 two predicate offenses. See Howard, 208 F.3d at 751. A defendant need not agree to commit or 3 facilitate every part of the substantive offense under RICO. See Salinas, 522 U.S. at 65, 118
4 S.Ct. 478. Further, a defendant need not have violated the substantive RICO provision in order
5 to be liable as a conspirator. See Beck, 120 S.Ct. at 1614-17.
6

7 In count one of the FAC plaintiffs allege that defendants agreed and conspired among 8 themselves to conduct or participate in the conduct of the affairs of various enterprises through a 9 pattern of racketeering activity. (FAC ¶ 174). In ¶ 101 of the factual allegations, plaintiffs allege 10 that the defendants entered into an agreement to either commit or keep secret the wrongful and 11 tortious acts described in the complaint. Further, it can be inferred from the allegations in ¶¶ 11
12 and 133-139 that the retailer defendants knew or were aware of the conditions at the factories
13 and, arguendo, knew of the essential nature and scope of the criminal scheme. Thus, plaintiffs 14 have sufficiently pleaded the retailer defendants' knowledge or awareness of the scheme and an 15 agreement to facilitate it.
16

17 Plaintiffs must also allege the requisite injury to property under § 1962(a) and (c) in order
18 to state a conspiracy claim under § 1962(d). See Beck, 120 S.Ct. at 1616 and n.9. As noted 19 supra, plaintiffs have not alleged the requisite injury under § 1962(a) and thus the conspiracy 20 claim based thereon fails; plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged a violation of § 1962(c) and their 21 conspiracy claim based thereon survives this motion to dismiss.
22

1 VICARIOUS / JOINT LIABILITY FOR COUNT 3 (ANTI-PEONAGE ACT),
2 COUNT 4 (PEONAGE AND INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE IN VIOLATION OF 3 THE 13TH AMENDMENT), AND COUNT 5 (INTERNATIONAL LAW VIOLATIONS)

4 Plaintiffs allege that the retailer defendants and manufacturer defendants are joint 5 venturers, joint conspirators, agents, and/or aiders and abettors of one another. Plaintiffs contend 6 that because of these relationships the retailer defendants are vicariously or jointly liable for the 7 alleged labor violations of the manufacturer defendants. Defendants contend such relationships 8 are not adequately alleged.

9 Joint venture is not sufficiently pleaded.

10 To allege the existence of a joint venture plaintiffs must allege an undertaking by two or 11 more persons jointly to carry out a single enterprise for profit. See Shell Oil Co., v. Prestidge, 12 249 F.2d 413, 415 (9th Cir. 1957). The elements of a joint venture are (1) joint interest in a 13 common business; (2) an understanding to share profits and losses; and (3) a right to joint 14 control. Jackson v. East Bay Hospital, 246 F.3d 1248, 1261 (9th Cir. 2001). See also 580
15 Folsom Associates v. Prometheus Development Company, 223 Cal. App.3d 1, 15-16, 272
16 Cal.Rptr. 227, 234 (1990). The existence of a joint venture may be implied from the acts and 17 declarations of the parties. 580 Folsom Associates, 223 Cal. App. at 15-16, 272 Cal.Rptr. at 234.

18 Although plaintiffs have adequately alleged the existence of certain RICO enterprises, the 19 alleged manufacturer enterprises and retailer enterprises do not constitute the “common business” 20 contemplated by a joint venture arrangement. Moreover, the plaintiffs’ allegations of the 21 competitive bidding process that the retailers employ negate their contention that the retailers and 22 manufacturers have joint interest in a common business. (FAC ¶ 133(g)). See, e.g., Universal 23 Sales Corp. v. California Press Mfg., 20 Cal.2d 751, 764-65, 128 P.2d 665, 673 (1942) (joint 24
25
26

1 manage some affair . . . by authority of and on account of [the principal].” In re Coupon
2 Clearing Service, 113 F.3d 1091, 1099 (9th Cir. 1997). The Restatement of Agency defines an 3 agency relationship as “the fiduciary relation which results from the manifestation of consent by 4 one person to another that the other shall act on his behalf and subject to his control, and consent
5 by the other so to act.” Restatement (Second) of Agency § 1(1) (1958). “[A]pparent agency arises
6 as a result of conduct of the principal which causes the third party reasonably to believe that the 7 agent possesses the authority.” Republic of Nicaragua v. Standard Fruit Co., 937 F.2d 469, 480
8 (9th Cir. 1991). An “important aspect in determining the existence of an agency relationship is 9 the degree of control exercised by the principal over the activities of the agent.” In re Coupon
10 Clearing Service, 113 F.3d at 1099.¹²

11
12
13 The complaint alleges a contractual relationship between the retailers and the 14 manufacturers for the manufacture of garments. Even though plaintiffs have alleged the 15 contracts provided the retailer defendants with the right to establish quality standards and turn-16 around times, and the right to monitor production, it cannot be inferred from the contracts alleged 17 or the conduct of the retailers that is alleged that the retailers possessed the right to control the 18 means and manner in which the manufacturers conducted their businesses or performed the 19 obligations under the contracts.¹³

20
21 ¹²
22 See also Cislav v. Southland Corp., 4 Cal.App.4th 1284, 1291, 6 Cal.Rptr.2d 386, 23 391 (1992) (“[T]he right to control the means and manner in which the result is achieved . . .
24 is significant in determining whether a principal-agency relationship exists.”); Restatement (Second) of Agency § 14 (1958) (“A principal has the right to control the conduct of the agent with respect to matters entrusted to him.”).

25 ¹³
26 Even where a contract provides for some supervisory rights as plaintiffs have alleged, liability will not be imposed absent affirmative interjection, which plaintiffs have not sufficiently

1 Assuming arguendo that this contractual relationship establishes a principal-agent
2 relationship, the allegations do not show that the manufacturers alleged unlawful conduct was 3 undertaken pursuant to actual or apparent authority conferred by the retailer defendants. A 4 principal may be liable for his agent's actions taken within the scope of their general apparent
5 authority and done on behalf of the principal as opposed for their own personal benefit. See Jund
6 v. Town of Hempstead, 941 F.2d 1271, 1280 (2nd Cir. 1991). Because the retailers and the 7 manufacturers both benefit from the production of garments at the lowest possible cost,
8 plaintiffs' allegations that the retailers profited from the manufacturers' conduct, without more,
9 are insufficient to infer the manufacturers were acting as the retailers agents and on the retailers'
10 behalf in performing the alleged unlawful acts. Further, plaintiffs' allegations that the retailers 11 exerted economic pressure on the manufacturer defendants without allegations that the retailers 12 had the right to control the means of production, are insufficient to show the retailers were acting 13 as principals in an agency relationship. See, e.g., Brown v. N.L.R.B., 462 F.2d 699, 703 (9th Cir.
14 1972) (evidence of economic control does not necessarily show an "employee" status as opposed 15
16
17
18
19 alleged. See McDonald v. Shell Oil Co., 44 Cal.2d 785, 788-791, 285 P.2d 902, 904-905 (1955) 20 (contract between parties providing that one party will have a general supervisory right over an 21 independent contractor so as to insure satisfactory completion of the contract does not make the 22 hirer liable for the independent contractor's negligent acts in performing the details of the work, 23 absent some showing that the hirer exercised active control over, interfered with, actively 24 directed the independent contractor's operation, or otherwise had some duty; the right to control
25 and the presence of the hirer at the site does not change that relationship.); Safeway Stores, Inc. v.
26 Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 202 Cal. App.2d 99, 110-110, 20 Cal.Rptr. 820, 825-826 (1962) (the right to act did not raise the duty to act and even where there is a duty of care owed, mere passive negligence or failure to act may not be sufficient to impose vicarious liability); Kuntz v. Del E. Webb Constr. Co., 57 Cal.2d 100, 105-107, 368 P.2d 127, 130-131 (1961) (mere right to see that work is satisfactorily completed imposes no duty upon the one hiring an independent contractor to ensure that the contractor's work is performed in conformity with all safety provisions).

1 to an independent contractor status; where there is a mutual economic goal, it is the right to 2 control the means used to pursue that goal that is highly material to determination of employee or 3 independent contractor status).

4 Aiding and abetting of civil claim is not sufficiently pleaded.

5
6 Civil aiding and abetting includes the following elements: “(1) the party whom the 7 defendant aids must perform a wrongful act that causes an injury; (2) the defendant must be 8 generally aware of his role as part of an overall illegal or tortious activity at the time that he 9 provides the assistance; and (3) the defendant must knowingly and substantially assist the 10 principal violation.” Halberstam v. Welch, 705 F.2d 472, 477 (D.C. Cir. 1983). In addition, 11 “[a]dvice or encouragement to act operates as moral support to a tortfeasor and if the act 12 encouraged is known to be tortious it has the same effect upon the liability of the adviser as 13 participation or physical assistance.” Id. at 478 (citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 876 14 (1979)).¹⁴

15
16 The business and contractual arrangements alleged, and the actions taken pursuant 17 thereto, do not show or imply that the retailers provided substantial assistance to the 18 manufacturers. Even if the quality control monitoring alleged could be considered substantial 19

20 _____
14

21 § 876. Persons Acting in Concert. For harm resulting to a third person from the 22 tortious conduct of another, one is subject to liability if he 23 (a) does a tortious act in concert with the other or pursuant to a common 24 design with him, or 25 (b) knows that the other’s conduct constitutes a breach of duty and gives 26 substantial assistance or encouragement to the other so to conduct himself, or
(c) gives substantial assistance to the other in accomplishing a tortious result and his own conduct, separately considered, constitutes a breach of duty to the third person.

Restatement (Second) of Torts § 876 (1979).

1 assistance, it is not assistance in the alleged peonage, involuntary servitude, or labor violations.

2 Plaintiffs have also alleged the retailer defendants "encouraged" the manufacturers'
3 conduct; however the conclusory allegations of encouragement are not supported by factual
4 allegations demonstrating active encouragement. To the contrary, plaintiffs' allegations show
5 that the retailers failed to act and remained silent. See id. at 481 (mere presence at the scene is 6 not sufficient for liability). Although silence has been found to constitute substantial assistance
7 under some circumstances, see id. at 485 n.14, the Supreme Court's decision in Central Bank
8 cautions against imposition of aiding and abetting liability for violation of a statute where 9 Congress has not expressly provided for such liability. See id., 511 U.S. at 182, 114 S.Ct. at 10 1450-51 ("Congress has not enacted a general civil aiding and abetting statute-either for suits by 11 the Government (when the Government sues for civil penalties or injunctive relief) or for suits by 12 private parties."). Accordingly, plaintiffs have not adequately pleaded that the retailers aided and 13 abetted in the manufacturer's conduct.
14
15

16 Civil conspiracy is adequately pleaded.

17 To plead a civil conspiracy, plaintiffs must allege (1) an agreement between two or more
18 persons, (2) to participate in an unlawful act or a lawful act in an unlawful manner, (3) an overt 19 act pursuant to and in furtherance of the common scheme, and (4) an injury caused by an 20 unlawful overt act performed by one of the parties to the agreement. Halberstam, 705 F.2d at 21 477. "It is only where means are employed, or purposes are accomplished, which are themselves 22 tortious, that conspirators who have not acted but have promoted the act will be held liable." Id.
23 "Proof of a tacit, as opposed to explicit, understanding is sufficient to show agreement." Id.
24

25 Plaintiffs have adequately alleged an agreement to participate in an unlawful scheme, 26

1 overt acts in furtherance thereof, and injury caused by tortious overt acts as discussed above in 2 the RICO analysis. Accordingly, plaintiffs have sufficiently pleaded that the retailers and the 3 manufacturers were co-conspirators.

4 COUNT 3 (VIOLATION OF THE ANTI-PEONAGE ACT); COUNT 4 (PEONAGE AND 5 INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE IN VIOLATION OF THE 13TH AMENDMENT)

6 Plaintiffs do not state a claim under the Anti-Peonage Act
7 because state action is required.

8 Defendants contend plaintiffs must allege state action in order to state a claim under the 9 Anti-Peonage Act and that because plaintiffs cannot allege state action, the claim must be 10 dismissed. This court agrees.

11 In 1867 Congress passed the Anti-Peonage Act, codified at 42 U.S.C. § 1994, which 12 prohibits the holding of individuals to forced servitude.¹⁵ See Craine v. Alexander, 756 F.2d 13 1070, 1074 (5th Cir. 1985). The Anti-Peonage Act was enacted to enforce the Thirteenth
14

15
16
17 ¹⁵ The Anti-Peonage Act states:

18 “The holding of any person to service or labor under the system known as peonage is 19 abolished and forever prohibited in any Territory or State of the United States; and all 20 acts, laws, resolutions, orders, regulations, or usages of any Territory or State, which have 21 heretofore established, maintained, or enforced, or by virtue of which any attempt shall 22 hereafter be made to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or indirectly, the voluntary or involuntary service of labor of any persons as peons, in liquidation of any debt or obligation, or otherwise, are declared null and void.” 42 U.S.C. § 1994.

23 The criminal sanctions provision of the Anti-Peonage Act have been codified at 18 U.S.C. §
24 1581. The statute states:

25 “(a) Whoever holds or returns any person to a condition of peonage, or arrests any person 26 with the intent of placing him in or returning him to a condition of peonage, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.”

1 Amendment. The Act basically performed three separate tasks: it abolished peonage,¹⁶ it
2 declared null and void all existing and future state laws and practices which enabled peonage to 3 exist,¹⁷ and it provided criminal penalties for individuals holding another in a state of peonage.¹⁸
4
5 See Pollack v. Williams, 322 U.S. 4, 8 n.8, 64 S.Ct. 792, 795 n.8 (1944).

6 Plaintiffs cite to Clyatt v. United States, 197 U.S. 207, 25 S.Ct. 429 (1905), as standing
7 for the proposition that state action is not required to state a claim under the Anti-Peonage Act.
8 In Clyatt, the Supreme Court granted certiorari to review a judgment convicting the defendant of 9 holding persons in peonage.¹⁹ In its analysis, the Court first considered the constitutionality of 10 the statutes²⁰ which made it a crime to hold or return a person to a state of peonage. Clyatt, 197
11 U.S. at 215, 25 S.Ct. at 430. In discussing the constitutionality of the statutes, the Court noted 12 that “Congress may enforce the Thirteenth Amendment by direct legislation” and “[i]n the 13

14 ¹⁶

15 See supra Clause One of the Anti-Peonage Act.

16 ¹⁷

17 See supra Clause Two of the Anti-Peonage Act.

18 ¹⁸

19 See supra The criminal sanctions provision of the Anti-Peonage Act, codified at 18 20 U.S.C. § 1581.

21 ¹⁹

22 The defendant in Clyatt was a private actor who was criminally charged by the United 23 States with holding the two plaintiffs in a condition of peonage. Clyatt, 197 U.S. at 209, 25 S.Ct.
24 at 429. The Supreme Court held that the evidence was insufficient to justify a finding of peonage.
Id. at 222, 25 S.Ct. at 433. “We have examined the testimony with great care to see if there is anything which would justify a finding of [peonage], and can find nothing. No matter how severe may be the condemnation which is due to the conduct of a party charged with a criminal offense, it is the imperative duty of this court to see that all the elements of his crime are proved... .” Id., 25 S.Ct. at 433.

25 ²⁰

26 In Clyatt, the Supreme Court reviewed the constitutionality of Rev. St. U.S. §§ 1990, 5526, which are predecessors to 42 U.S.C. § 1994 and 18 U.S.C. § 1581.

1 exercise of that power Congress has enacted these [statutes] denouncing peonage, and punishing
2 one who holds another in that condition of involuntary servitude.” Id. at 218, 25 S.Ct. at 431.
3 The Court went further and stated that “[w]e entertain no doubt of the validity of this legislation, 4 or its applicability to the case of any person holding another in a state of peonage, and this is 5 whether there be a municipal ordinance or state law sanctioning such holding.” Id., 25 S.Ct. at 6 431. Plaintiffs rely on this statement as controlling precedent that an individual could be subject
7 to a civil suit for peonage under the Anti-Peonage Act whether or not there was some state law or 8 practice enabling the peonage. This court disagrees with the Plaintiffs’ interpretation because 9 Clyatt involved a criminal prosecution. The Court finds no basis in Clyatt for assuming that an 10 individual has a civil cause of action under the Anti-Peonage Act against another individual, 11 absent state action.
12

13
14 In Clyatt, the Court upheld the constitutionality of the predecessors of the Anti-Peonage 15 Act and its criminal sanctions provision. The Clyatt Court made a distinction between the 16 statutes when it stated that “Congress has enacted these [statutes] denouncing peonage, and 17 punishing one who holds another in that condition of involuntary servitude.” Id. at 218, 25 S.Ct.
18 at 431. In this statement, it appears that the Court was distinguishing between the Anti-Peonage 19 Act itself and its criminal sanctions provision. This distinction is further emphasized when the 20 Court acknowledged “the validity of this legislation, [and] its applicability to the case of any 21 person holding another in a state of peonage, and this is whether there be a municipal ordinance
22 or state law sanctioning such holding.” Id., 25 S.Ct. at 431. This court interprets that statement 23 to denote that the Supreme Court upholds the constitutionality of the Anti-Peonage Act and its 24 criminal sanctions provision, and further upholds the criminal sanctions provision’s
25

1 “applicability to the case of any person holding another in a state of peonage” whether or not
2 there is a state law or ordinance allowing such conduct. In other words, Clyatt appears to stand
3 for the proposition that state action is not required for a criminal proceeding pursuant to 18
4 U.S.C. § 1581, the criminal sanctions provision of the Anti-Peonage Act. The issue of whether
5 state action is required for a civil proceeding pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1994, the Anti-Peonage
6 Act, was not definitively addressed in Clyatt.

8 In Craine v. Alexander, 756 F.2d 1070, 1074 (5th Cir. 1985), the Fifth Circuit held that a 9 plaintiff asserting a claim of peonage must show some state responsibility for the abuse
10 complained of in order to bring the claim.²¹ “Section 1994 renders invalid only the “acts, laws, 11 resolutions, orders, regulations or usages” of the states that establish or enforce labor as a peon.”
12 Craine, 756 F.2d at 1074. The Fifth Circuit stated that its conclusion was “buttressed by the 13 Supreme Court’s language in Pollock v. Williams,” and cited the following language from 14 Pollock:

16 Forced labor in some special circumstances may be consistent with the general
17 basic system of free labor. For example, forced labor has been sustained as a 18 means of punishing crime. . . . But in general the defense against oppressive 19 hours, pay, working conditions or treatment is the right to change employers.
20 When the master can compel and the laborer cannot escape the obligation to go
21 on, there is no power below to redress and no incentive above to relieve a harsh
22 overlordship or unwholesome conditions of work. Whatever of social value there 23 may be, and of course it is great, in enforcing contracts and collections of debts,

21 21

22 In Craine, a state prisoner brought a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit seeking damages for battery
23 against the County, the Sheriff and certain deputies, and the Board of Supervisors of the County
24 Jail. Craine, 756 F.2d 1070, 1071 (5th Cir. 1985). The plaintiff also sought damages under 42
25 U.S.C. § 1994, the Anti-Peonage Act, for being subjected to peonage. Id. The Fifth Circuit held 26 “that no reasonable jury could have found that any ‘acts, laws, resolutions, orders, regulations, or Id. at 1074.”

1 Congress has put it beyond debate that no indebtedness warrants a suspension of 2 the right to be free from compulsory service. This congressional policy means 3 that no state can make the quitting of work any component of a crime, or make 4 criminal sanctions available for holding unwilling persons to labor. Id. at 1074-75

(citing Pollack v. Williams, 322 U.S. 4, 17-18, 64 S.Ct. 792, 799 (1944)).

5 The Craine court concluded “[t]his Congressional policy, even outside the context of a 6 state criminal statute, would have little application unless it is the state that is enforcing the 7 peonage, whether directly or indirectly, as opposed to an individual.” Craine, 756 F.2d at 1075.
8

9 As a second basis for requiring state action, the Craine court stated:

10 Craine asks us to construe § 1994 broadly so as to give him a right of action for 11 damages under § 1983 "without consideration of the perpetrator." He presents us 12 with no convincing plea why we should ignore what Congress chose to make 13 essential. In defining this right as it did, Congress did not choose to abolish 14 usages or customs of individuals that might be likened to conditions of peonage.
15 The remedy for such individual acts lies in the criminal sanction of 18 U.S.C. §
16 1581 against holding another to a condition of peonage. . . . We decline to expand 17 the scope of the § 1994 right in direct contravention of legislative expression.
18 Id. at 1075.

19 This court finds Craine dispositive of the issue at hand. Craine, relying on Pollack, 20 continues where Clyatt left off. Clyatt upheld the constitutionality of the Anti-Peonage Act and 21 its criminal sanctions provision and indicated that state action is not required for a criminal 22 proceeding pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1581. Whereas, Craine takes a step further and specifically 23 holds that state action is required for a civil proceeding pursuant to the Anti-Peonage Act. This 24 court finds the Fifth Circuit’s holding in Craine consistent with a direct reading of the Anti-25 Peonage Act. The Act completely abolished peonage in its first clause and declared null and 26 void all existing and future state laws and practices which enable peonage to exist in its second.
See Pollack, 322 U.S. at 8 n.8, 64 S.Ct. at 795 n.8. The Act also provides criminal penalties

1 under its separate criminal sanctions provision for individuals holding another in a state of 2 peonage. See Id.

3 Accordingly, and for the above reasons, the court finds that allegations of state action are 4 required to state a claim for violation of the Anti-Peonage Act.
5

6 The Thirteenth Amendment does not provide plaintiffs with a direct cause of action
7 for either involuntary servitude or peonage.

8 Count four asserts a claim against all defendants for violation of the Thirteenth
9 Amendment.²² The claim is based on separate allegations of peonage and involuntary servitude, 10 not slavery. Defendants contend that plaintiffs may not bring a claim directly under the 11 Thirteenth Amendment against private actors. This court agrees.

12 The Supreme Court in the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U.S. 3, 20, 3 S.Ct. 18, 28 (1883),
13 stated that the Thirteenth Amendment “is undoubtedly self-executing without any ancillary
14 legislation, so far as its terms are applicable to any existing state of circumstances. By its own 15 unaided force and effect it abolished slavery, and established universal freedoms.” The Court 16 continued, however, that “[s]till, legislation may be necessary and proper to meet all the various 17 cases and circumstances to be affected by it, and to prescribe proper modes of redress for its 18 violation in letter or spirit.” Id.
19

20
21 ²²

22 The Thirteenth Amendment states:

23 Section 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as punishment for 24 crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

25 Section 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate 26 legislation.

1 Plaintiffs contend that a private right of action is available for violations of constitutional 2 rights based on the Supreme Court's holding in Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of Fed.
3 Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S.Ct. 1999 (1971) (holding that an action could be 4 brought directly under the Fourth Amendment against a federal official). However, a review of 5 federal case law indicates that the specific issue before this court — whether a plaintiff can bring 6 a claim directly under the Thirteenth Amendment against a private actor — has not yet been 7 thoroughly analyzed by the high court.

9 The Supreme Court in City of Memphis v. Greene, 451 U.S. 100, 101 S.Ct. 1584 (1981), 10 addressed a claim brought against the city and its officials both under 42 U.S.C. § 1982 and 11 directly under the Thirteenth Amendment. The Court confirmed that the Thirteenth Amendment 12 is self-executing and considered the claim brought directly under the Amendment.²³ See id. at 13 124, 101 S.Ct. at 1598. In its analysis, the Court first determined that the plaintiffs in City of 14 Memphis did not have an injury that fell within the reach of § 1982. Id. at 124, 101 S.Ct. at

16 _____
17 23

18 In City of Memphis, the plaintiffs claimed the city's decision to close a road connecting a 19 white residential community with a predominantly black area was racially motivated, placed a 20 disparate burden on black citizens, and constituted an unconstitutional badge of slavery. Id. at 21 124, 101 S.Ct. at 1598. Before considering whether plaintiffs' rights under the Thirteenth 22 Amendment had been violated, the Court determined that plaintiffs' injury did "not involve any 23 impairment to the kind of property interests that we have identified as being within the reach of § 24 1982." Id. The defendants had argued that because the closing did not violate § 1982, which 25 was enacted pursuant to § 2 of the Amendment, "any judicial characterization of an isolated 26 street closing as a badge of slavery would constitute the usurpation of a law making power far beyond the imagination of the amendment's authors." Id. The Court addressed defendants' argument stating that "[p]ursuant to the authority created by § 2 of the Thirteenth Amendment, Congress has enacted legislation to abolish both conditions of involuntary servitude and the badges and incidents of slavery. The exercise of that authority is not inconsistent with the view that the Amendment has self-executing force. As the Court noted in Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co., . . . [b]y its own unaided force and effect, the Thirteenth Amendment abolished slavery and established universal freedom." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted).

1 1598. The Court then stated, “[w]e therefore must consider whether the street closing violated
2 respondents’ constitutional rights.”²⁴ Id., 101 S.Ct. at 1598.

3 At first glance, it may appear that City of Memphis stands for the proposition that a court
4 may consider a civil rights claim brought pursuant to the Thirteenth Amendment, and not just a
5 claim brought through “ancillary legislation.” In City of Memphis, the Supreme Court
6 acknowledged that the Thirteenth Amendment “abolished slavery” and “established universal 7 freedom.” Id. at 125, 101 S.Ct. at 1599. But, it “left open the question whether Section 1 of the 8 Amendment by its own terms did anything more than abolish slavery,” id. at 125-26, 101 S.Ct. at 9 1599, because the Court could not characterize the public action challenged in City of Memphis
10 as a badge or incident of slavery. Id. at 126, 101 S.Ct. at 1599. More importantly, the Supreme 11 Court never stated specifically that a direct cause of action under the Thirteenth Amendment 12 against private actors was available. In Bivens, the decision to imply a direct action under the 13 Constitution was premised heavily on the fact that federal actors were involved. Like Bivens, 14 City of Memphis involved government officials, albeit municipal officials. The present case 15 involves only private actors, and this court finds that to be a crucial distinction. Even though the 16 Supreme Court seems to have acknowledged the existence of a direct cause of action under the 17 Thirteenth Amendment against public actors, this court does not believe City of Memphis can be 18 construed so broadly as to also include private actors.
19 20 21

22
23 ²⁴

24 The Supreme Court did not find that plaintiffs’ constitutional rights had been violated.
25 The Court stated, “[t]o decide the narrow constitutional question presented by this record we 26 need not speculate about the sort of impact on a racial group that might be prohibited by the Amendment itself. We merely hold that the impact of the closing . . . does not reflect a violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.” Id. at 128-29, 101 S.Ct. at 1601.

1 However, in the trial courts, where the issue has more often been confronted directly, the 2 weight of authority holds that there is no direct cause of action against private actors under the
3 Thirteenth Amendment: Del Elmer; Zachay v. Metzger, 967 F.Supp. 398, 402 (S.D. Cal. 1997)
4 (finding that, in the absence of any authority allowing a plaintiff to proceed directly under the 5 Thirteenth Amendment against a private party, plaintiff could not state a claim; the court
6 alternatively found that even if such a claim existed, the facts alleged by plaintiff did not 7 constitute peonage or involuntary servitude); Holland v. Bd. of Trustees of Univ. of D. of 8 Columbia, 794 F.Supp. 420, 424 (D.D.C. 1992) (no direct cause of action for racial 9 discrimination under the Thirteenth Amendment; plaintiff must pursue his remedy through the 10 statutes adopted pursuant to the Amendment); Roberts v. Walmart Stores, Inc., 736 F.Supp.
11 1527, 1528 (E.D. Mo. 1990) (no direct cause of action for racial discrimination under the 12 Thirteenth Amendment; plaintiffs need to base claims on one of the implementing statutes of the 13 Thirteenth Amendment, e.g. 42 U.S.C. § 1981 and § 1982); Sanders v. A.J. Canfield Co., 635 14 F.Supp. 85, 87 (N.D. Ill. 1986) (no direct cause of action under the Thirteenth Amendment for 15 race and sex discrimination against a private employer; plaintiff must resort to the statutory 16 remedies created by Congress under the power granted to it by the amendment).²⁷
17 18
19

20 Similarly, in Cox, the Fourth Circuit did not directly discuss nor did it rule out whether a 21 direct cause of action under the Thirteenth Amendment exists. In affirming in part and reversing 22 in part the decision of the district court, the Fourth Circuit noted that “[t]he district court should 23 not overlook, however, that plaintiff sues directly under the [T]hirteenth and [F]ourteenth
24 [A]mendments, as well as under § 1983.” Cox, 529 F.2d at 50. It would be far reaching for this 25 court to interpret the Fourth Circuit’s statement in Cox and the Fifth Circuit’s assumption in 26 Channer as recognizing a direct cause of action under the Thirteenth Amendment.

²⁷

See also Westray v. Porthole, Inc., 586 F.Supp. 834, 838-39 (D. Md. 1984) (Thirteenth Amendment does not give rise to an independent cause of action for discrimination; plaintiffs

1 The only case cited by the parties that fully analyzed the availability of a direct cause of 2 action against a private actor under the Thirteenth Amendment using the factors set forth in 3 Bivens is Turner v. Unification Church, 473 F.Supp 367 (D. R.I. 1978). In Turner, the plaintiff
4 filed a Thirteenth Amendment claim based on allegations of coercion which resulted in long 5 hours of compulsory service soliciting money and selling items for the Unification Church for 6 which she was not paid. Turner, 473 F.Supp. at 370-371. The Turner court noted that plaintiff's 7 claim — the right to be free from involuntary servitude — was a federally protected right and the 8 court therefore had the power to imply a cause of action from the Thirteenth Amendment to 9 redress a violation of that interest. Id. at 374. However, the court determined that it should not 10 imply such a cause of action because, unlike Bivens, Turner only involved private wrongdoings
11 which are traditionally and adequately addressed by state law remedies such as false 12 imprisonment, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and assault and battery, and did not 13 involve the potential for harm that is attendant with a federal officer unconstitutionally exercising 14 his authority. Id. The Turner court further stated that those state law remedies were not 15 inconsistent with or hostile to the federal interest of protecting individuals from involuntary 16 servitude and, further, implying a direct cause of action under the Thirteenth Amendment based 17 18 19

20 21 must avail themselves of statutory remedies); Vietnamese Fisherman's Ass'n v. The Knights of 22 the Ku Klux Klan, 518 F.Supp. 993, 1012 (S.D. Tx.1981) (although Thirteenth Amendment
23 claim was dropped, the court stated that a claim asserting the right to be free from the incidents
24 and badges of servitude against a private party is enforceable through 42 U.S.C. § 1981 and §
25 1985(3), and not under the Thirteenth Amendment itself); Clark v. Universal Builders, Inc., 409
26 F.Supp. 1274, 1279 (1976) (court held that § 1982 claim, coupled with the Thirteenth Amendment, did state a claim upon which relief could be based, but dismissed a claim based solely upon the Thirteenth Amendment stating that "[t]hat Amendment simply does not operate in such a manner as to allow an action without implementing statutes such as the Civil Rights Act of 1866.").

1 on the conduct of private actors would constitutionalize a large portion of state tort law. Id. The 2 Turner court also noted that the rights guaranteed by the Thirteenth Amendment are protected
3 through 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1985(3), and 1994. Therefore, “the implication of a cause of 4 action from the thirteenth amendment appears unnecessary and superfluous.” Id. This court
5 finds the analysis in Turner persuasive and, together with the weight of case law building on 6 Bivens, concludes that the more reasoned analysis is that it appears that there is no direct cause of 7 action against private actors under the Thirteenth Amendment. This court recognizes that unlike 8 the Fourth Amendment which applies to federal actors, the Thirteenth Amendment “operat[es]
9 upon the acts of individuals, whether sanctioned by state legislation or not.” Civil Rights Cases, 10 109 U.S. at 23, 3 S.Ct. at 30. The weight of authority, however, persuades this court to find that 11 the absence of a clear statement from the Supreme Court whether a direct cause of action under 12 the Thirteenth Amendment against private actors is available and the absence of a governmental 13 actor in the present case is dispositive of the issue at hand.

14
15
16 Furthermore, the existence of federal statutory remedies convinces this court that a direct 17 cause of action under the Thirteenth Amendment against a private actor is unavailable. Pursuant 18 to Section Two of the Thirteenth Amendment, “Congress has enacted legislation to abolish both 19 the conditions of involuntary servitude and the ‘badges and incidents of slavery.’” City of 20 Memphis, 451 U.S. at 125, 101 S.Ct. at 1599. The Supreme Court has identified those laws as 42
21 U.S.C. § 1981 (“protects the right of all citizens to enter into and enforce contracts”), § 1982
22 (“providing broad protection to property rights”), § 1985(3) (“protects blacks from conspiracies 23 to deprive them of ‘the equal protection of the laws’”), § 1994 (“which prohibits peonage”), and 24 18 U.S.C. § 1581 (“which provides for criminal punishment of those who impose conditions of 25
26

1 peonage on any person”). Id. at 125 n.38, 101 S.Ct. at 1599 n.38. While Congress has enacted
2 civil rights laws under the Thirteenth Amendment, those laws do not specifically provide a
3 remedy for involuntary servitude. Of the statutory remedies, only the Anti-Peonage Act, 42
4 U.S.C. § 1994, directly addresses a condition akin to involuntary servitude, but requires the 5 additional element of a debt owed to a master. The remaining statutes identified are aimed at the 6 incidents and badges of slavery and do not appear to provide plaintiffs with a remedy for 7 involuntary servitude itself. However, it is not the job of this court to judicially create a cause of 8 action and damage remedy not provided for by the Constitution and not enacted by Congress.
9 The Constitution has vested Congress with the power to legislate. Therefore, the doctrine of 10 separation of powers directs this court not to meddle in the legislation business of Congress. In 11 light of Turner, the plaintiffs in this case can look to state law remedies for their involuntary
12 servitude claims. In Turner, the court noted that state law remedies such as false imprisonment, 13 intentional infliction of emotional distress, and assault and battery adequately addressed the 14 plaintiff’s involuntary servitude claims. Id. Such state law claims are not inconsistent with or 15 hostile to the federal interest of protecting individuals from involuntary servitude. “When private 16 wrongdoings can be adequately redressed by state law, there is less compulsion for the judiciary 17 to erect additional constitutional causes of action.” Turner, 473 F.Supp. at 374. Therefore, 18 based on Turner, the interests at stake here may be satisfactorily vindicated by resort to local 19 common law causes of action.
20 21
22

23 Accordingly, the court finds that a claim for involuntary servitude or peonage is not 24 available to plaintiffs under the Thirteenth Amendment because of the absence of a clear 25 directive from the Supreme Court, the absence of a governmental actor in the present case, and 26

1 the presence of other adequate remedies, either under federal law or state law, that address
2 plaintiffs' claim. Because the Anti-Peonage Act addresses plaintiffs' claim for peonage, as 3 discussed below, it is not appropriate to imply an independent cause of action for peonage under 4 the Thirteenth Amendment.

5
6 Plaintiffs do not state a claim for involuntary servitude.

7 Defendants contend plaintiffs have not stated a RICO claim using involuntary servitude
8 or peonage as predicate acts because the allegations do not show that plaintiffs had no other 9 choice but to labor. The retailer defendants further argue that plaintiffs were not employed by, or 10 owed a debt to, the retailer defendants and thus they cannot state a claim against the retailers.

11 I. Elements of involuntary servitude.

12 Plaintiffs have also alleged federal criminal statute violations of involuntary servitude, 18
13 U.S.C. § 1584, and peonage, 18 U.S.C. § 1581, as RICO predicate acts. In United States v.
14 Kozminski, 487 U.S. 931, 952, 108 S.Ct. 2751, 2765 (1988), the Supreme Court determined, with 15 respect to criminal prosecutions, that the use or threatened use of physical restraint, physical 16 coercion or legal coercion to compel labor is required to establish the crime of involuntary
17 servitude.²⁸ The Court specifically declined to include the compulsion of labor through 18

19
20 ²⁸
21 More specifically, the Supreme Court stated “[a]bsent change by Congress, we hold that, for 22 purposes of criminal prosecution under § 241 or § 1584, the term "involuntary servitude" 23 necessarily means a condition of servitude in which the victim is forced to work for the 24 defendant by the use or threat of physical restraint or physical injury, or by the use or threat of 25 coercion through law or the legal process. This definition encompasses those cases in which the 26 defendant holds the victim in servitude by placing the victim in fear of such physical restraint or injury or legal coercion. Our holding does not imply that evidence of other means of coercion, or of poor working conditions, or of the victim's special vulnerabilities is irrelevant in a prosecution under these statutes. As we have indicated, the vulnerabilities of the victim are relevant in determining whether the physical or legal coercion or threats thereof could plausibly have

1 psychological coercion as a form of involuntary servitude because such a subjective standard
2 could criminalize a broad range of day-to-day activities and subject individuals to the risk of 3 arbitrary or discriminatory prosecution and conviction because the statute fails to provide fair
4 notice of the conduct to which one must conform. See id. at 949-50, 108 S.Ct. at 2763. The 5 Court further noted that an earlier provision in the statute which created a special distinction for 6 vulnerable victims such as immigrants, children and mental incompetents, had been eliminated.
7 See id. at 948, 108 S.Ct. at 2763. “By construing § 241 and § 1584 to prohibit only compulsion
8 of services through physical or legal coercion, we adhere to the time-honored interpretive 9 guideline that uncertainty concerning the ambit of criminal statutes should be resolved in favor of 10 lenity.” Id. at 952, 108 S.Ct. at 2764.

11
12
13 The Supreme Court in Kozminski appeared to recognize that threatened deportation could 14 constitute legal coercion. See id. at 948, 108 S.Ct. at 2762 (“it is possible that threatening . . . an 15 immigrant with deportation could constitute the threat of legal coercion that induces involuntary 16 servitude”). The Ninth Circuit also appears to endorse this view. See Kimes v. United States, 17 939 F.2d 776, 778 (9th Cir. 1991) (conviction for involuntary servitude based on evidence of 18 physical abuse and threats of deportation was upheld because conviction was based on the 19

20 21 _____
22 compelled the victim to serve. In addition, a trial court could properly find that evidence of other 23 means of coercion or of extremely poor working conditions is relevant to corroborate disputed 24 evidence regarding the use or threatened use of physical or legal coercion, the defendant's
25 intention in using such means, or the causal effect of such conduct. We hold only that the jury 26 must be instructed that compulsion of services by the use or threatened use of physical or legal coercion is a necessary incident of a condition of involuntary servitude. . . . We disagree with the Court of Appeals to the extent it determined that a defendant could violate § 241 or § 1584 by means other than the use or threatened use of physical or legal coercion where the victim is a minor, an immigrant, or one who is mentally incompetent.” Id. at 952-53, 108 S.Ct. at 2765.

1 requisite physical and legal coercion).²⁹

2 The Kozminski Court concluded “[i]n short, we agree with Judge Friendly’s observation
3 [in United States v. Schackney] that “the most ardent believer in civil rights legislation might not 4 think that cause would be advanced by permitting the awful machinery of the criminal law to be
5 brought into play whenever an employee asserts that his will to quit has been subdued by a threat
6 which seriously affects his future welfare but as to which he still has a choice, however painful.”
7 Kozminski, 487 U.S. at 950, 108 S.Ct. at 2763.
8

9 Accordingly, to establish involuntary servitude as a RICO predicate act, plaintiffs must 10 allege facts to show they were forced to work by the use or threat of physical restraint, physical 11

12 ²⁹

13 The Second Circuit in United States v. Shackney, 333 F.2d 475 (2nd Cir. 1964), also 14 considered whether the threat of deportation constituted legal coercion sufficient to sustain a 15 criminal charge of involuntary servitude. The court held that threatening immigrant workers
16 with deportation does not constitute involuntary servitude. Shackney, 33 F.2d at 486. The court 17 stated “[v]arious combinations of physical violence, or indications that more would be used on 18 any attempt to escape, and of threats to cause immediate legal confinement, whether for the 19 escape or some other reason, have also been held sufficient But we see no basis for 20 concluding that because the [criminal involuntary servitude] statute can be satisfied by a credible
21 threat of imprisonment, it should also be considered satisfied by a threat to have the employee 22 sent back to the country of his origin, at least absent circumstances which would make such 23 deportation equivalent to imprisonment or worse. A credible threat of deportation might well 24 constitute such duress as to invalidate any agreement made under its influence, as, for example, if 25 on the completion of the Oros' contract Shackney had threatened to have them deported unless 26 they made another; very likely, also, if something was sought or obtained for withdrawing such a threat, the maker could be successfully prosecuted under state blackmail or extortion statutes.
But a holding in involuntary servitude means to us action by the master causing the servant to have, or to believe he has, no way to avoid continued service or confinement, in Mr. Justice Harlan's language, 'superior and overpowering force, constantly present and threatening,' . . . not a situation where the servant knows he has a choice between continued service and freedom, even if the master has led him to believe that the choice may entail consequences that are exceedingly bad. This seems to us a line that is intelligible and consistent with the great purpose of the 13th Amendment; to go beyond it would be inconsistent with the language and the history.
. . . While a credible threat of deportation may come close to the line, it still leaves the employee with a choice, and we do not see how we could fairly bring it within § 1584 . . .” Id. at 486.

1 injury or legal coercion and that they had no other choice. The “special vulnerabilities” alleged 2 by plaintiffs are relevant only in determining whether the physical and/or legal coercion alleged 3 or threats thereof could have plausibly compelled the Class members to work. Plaintiffs must 4 also allege physical and/or legal coercion and that they were left with no other choice but to 5 work. Factual allegations of psychological coercion may be considered in determining whether 6 plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged the required elements. The motion to dismiss is granted but 7 plaintiffs are given leave to amend.
8

9 2. Elements of peonage.

10 The Court also defined peonage as “a condition in which the victim is coerced by threat 11 of legal sanction to work off a debt to the master.” Id. at 943, 108 S.Ct. at 2760. Peonage was 12 described more fully by the Supreme Court in Clyatt which stated:
13

14 It may be defined as a status or condition of compulsory service, based upon the 15 indebtedness of the peon to the master. The basal fact is indebtedness. . . . One fact 16 existed universally: all were indebted to their masters. This was the cord by which they 17 seemed bound to their master’s service. Upon this is based a condition of compulsory 18 service. Peonage is sometimes classified as voluntary or involuntary; but this implies 19 simply a difference in the mode of origin, but none in the character of the servitude. The 20 one exists where the debtor voluntarily contracts to enter the service of his creditor. The 21 other is forced upon the debtor by some provision of law. But peonage, however created, 22 is compulsory service—involuntary servitude. The peon can release himself therefrom, it
23 is true, by the payment of the debt, but otherwise the service is enforced. A clear 24 distinction exists between peonage and the voluntary performance of labor or rendering
25 of services in payment of a debt. In the latter case the debtor, though contracting to pay 26 his indebtedness by labor or service, and subject, like any other contractor, to an action for damages for breach of that contract, can elect at any time to break it, and no law or force compels performance or a continuance of the service. . . . That which is contemplated by the statute is compulsory service to secure the payment of a debt.”

Clyatt, 197 U.S. at 215-16, 25 S.Ct. at 430.

The Court in United States v. Reynolds phrased the issue as follows: “[w]e must

1 determine whether the [alleged victim] was in reality working for a debt which he owed the 2 [master], and whether the labor was performed under such coercion as to become compulsory
3 service for the discharge of the debt.” Reynolds, 235 U.S. 133, 144, 36 S.Ct. 86, 88 (1914).

4
5 In order to allege a claim for peonage, there must be a debt owed to the employer and the 6 employer must apply coercion of such a nature that the debtor has no choice but to work off the 7 debt. Based on Supreme Court authority, threats and/or use of physical coercion and/or legal 8 coercion are also required elements of a claim for peonage but the legal ramifications ordinarily 9 attendant with a breach of an employment contract cannot be considered legal coercion resulting 10 in peonage.

11 Plaintiffs’ allegations that their “compulsion to labor” is the result of their debts
12 owed to their employers are sufficient
13 to withstand a motion to dismiss their peonage claim.

14 Although it is a close question, plaintiffs’ allegations state a claim for peonage. This is 15 because the alleged compulsion under which plaintiffs labor is not simply the threats and/or use 16 of physical and legal coercion; rather, it includes plaintiffs’ fear of the threatened consequences if 17 they are unable to pay their recruitment fee debt, which plaintiffs allege is essentially a debt
18 owed to their employer. Paragraph 9 of the FAC is illustrative of the essence of plaintiffs’
19 contention that they had no other choice but to work: “they live in constant fear of termination 20 by their employers, which would result in their inability to work, deportation to their home 21 country, and acceleration of the large recruitment fee debt they incurred at the outset of their 22 employment.”

24 Plaintiffs have alleged threats and use of physical coercion and legal coercion by the 25 manufacturer defendants; however, plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged that these coercive 26

1 measures alone robbed them of all choice. Moreover, even accepting as true as the court must
2 the well-pleaded factual allegations of threats and use of physical coercion and legal coercion,
3 the allegations are not of a nature or degree, even given plaintiffs' alleged special vulnerabilities,
4 that it may be reasonably inferred that plaintiffs had no choice but to work.³⁰ That plaintiffs
5

6 30

7 Plaintiffs have alleged several highly coercive circumstances. For example, plaintiffs
8 allege there were physical restrictions in the form of curfews and being restricted to the factory
9 compound. They also allege economic punishment for violations thereof and that financial or 10 physical punishment could also be visited on their families for curfew violations. (FAC ¶ 126).
11 Plaintiffs allege some class members have been subject to false arrest "allegedly at the request of 12 the Contractor Defendants." (FAC ¶ 129). Plaintiffs allege one contractor defendant threatened 13 all his employees with physical retribution and retribution against their families in China if the 14 workers spoke to anyone about conditions. (FAC ¶ 130). Paragraph 129 typifies plaintiffs'
15 factual allegations of physical and legal coercion:

16 "[t]he Contractor Defendants also cause plaintiffs and Class members to be 17 constantly fearful of harmful physical contact. Plaintiffs and Class members have 18 been repeatedly threatened by armed security guards if attempts are made to leave 19 the factory grounds. Numerous plaintiffs and Class members have been 20 physically threatened during work hours when the Contractor Defendants' 21 supervisors punished employees for performance or other behavior the 22 supervisors chose to punish. Employees of the Contractor Defendants curse Class 23 members without justification, threaten them with termination or dock their pay, 24 in large part not for legitimate work-related reasons but to ensure continued
25 domination and control over the Class members' lives by reinforcing the message
26 that the Contractor Defendants have absolute power over the Class members.
Any appearance of workers standing up for their rights or protesting bad treatment is dealt with harshly; workers are often removed from the factory and penalized with from one to four days time in their barracks without pay, or even fired and placed on a plane and deported to their homeland. The economic consequences of such action makes the Class members economically and psychologically beholden to the Contractor Defendants, because if Class members are terminated, their recruitment fee is not returned or it automatically becomes due and payable and their deposits are forfeited. In repeated instances, Class members have been slapped and physically abused by supervisors employed by the Contractor Defendants. Class members have also been subjected to false arrest by local police, allegedly at the request of the Contractor Defendants, where Class members have been held for 24-36 hours then released with no charges filed. All of these methods of intimidation are designed to ensure that Class members do not

1 made a choice to work, even in the face of the alleged physical and/or legal coercion, is 2 supported by the allegations showing that they repeatedly renewed their one-year employment
3 contracts.³¹ It is only with the additional consideration of the debt owed to the employer and the 4 consequences of being unable to pay the debt that the allegations suggest that plaintiffs were then
5 robbed of all choice.³²

6
7 Courts have repeatedly held that the financial consequences attending the quitting of 8 one's job make the choice between continuing to work under adverse conditions and quitting
9 employment an unpleasant choice, but nevertheless a choice.³³ However, when the labor is tied

10
11 _____
12 protest, dissent or organize during their time in the CNMI garment factories.”

13 This paragraph alleges threats of and use of physical coercion and legal coercion but also 14 shows that the compulsion under which plaintiffs worked was the consequences of being unable 15 to pay their recruitment fee debt.

16
17 ³¹

18 For example, Doe IX has been employed by Top Fashion since 1997 (FAC ¶ 23), Doe X
19 was employed by United International Corp. between 1996 and 1999 (FAC ¶ 24), and Doe XI
20 has been employed by Pang Jin since 1997 (FAC ¶ 25).

21
22 ³²

23 See, e.g., Paragraphs 122, 129 and 132, for example, shows plaintiffs' compulsion to 24 work based on their debt: “Class members agree to pay a fee ranging from $2,000-$7,000 to the 25 recruiting agency, which fee is paid either prior to departing for the CNMI or paid bi-weekly 26 during the Class members' tenure in the CNMI, with up to 90% of their bi-weekly salary being paid to the recruiter. Between the repayment of this recruitment fee and the monthly housing and food costs imposed by the Contractor Defendants (which can total up to $2,400 a year), at a minimum wage of $3.05 per hour, repayment of these fees and costs becomes the overriding obligation of each Class member entering the CNMI, establishing the economic bond (and subsequent peonage status) to the Contractor Defendants.”

27
28 ³³

29 See Winthal v. Mendez, 76 Civ. 3161 (JMC) 1978 Lexis 1832 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 18, 1978)
30 (“threats of deportation of future unemployment do not state a claim for involuntary servitude.
31 So long as the servant knows he has a choice between continued service and freedom, he is not 32 working involuntarily.”). See also Belefant v. Negev Airbase Constructors, No. 82 Civ.

1 to a debt owed to the employer and the employer physically coerces the worker to labor until the 2 debt is paid or the consequences of failing to work to pay off the debt are so severe and outside
3 the customary legal remedy that the worker is compelled to labor, a condition of peonage results,
4 and this is the essence of plaintiffs' allegations.

5
6 Plaintiffs have stated a claim for peonage against the retailer defendants.

7 At this stage of the proceedings the only question before the court is the sufficiency of 8 the pleadings to withstand a motion to dismiss. Although plaintiffs' have not alleged that they 9 worked for or owed a debt to the retailer defendants, or that the retailer defendants exerted 10 physical or legal coercion to force plaintiffs to work, and plaintiffs' allegations are insufficient to 11 infer a joint venture or agency relationship between the retailer defendants and the manufacturer 12 defendants that would permit vicarious liability to be imposed upon the retailer defendants, they 13 have adequately alleged their conspiracy theory, supra, which may impose liability on the 14 retailer defendants.
15
16
17

18 4598(GLG) 1984 WL 278943, *8 (S.D.N.Y. Jan 13, 1984) (the court stated that "unless a 19 plaintiff alleges that he does not have the option of leaving his job, his claims...must be 20 dismissed."); Wicks v. Southern Pacific Co., 231 F.2d 130, 138 (9th Cir. 1956) ("While leaving 21 their present employment would entail serious losses in terms of seniority rights, medical 22 benefits and retirement benefits, the fact remains that appellants are not being compelled or 23 coerced to work against their will for the benefit of another."); Kaveny v. Miller, No. Civ.A. 93-24 0218, 1993 WL 298718, *2 (E.D. Pa. July 30, 1993) (plaintiff's claim for involuntary servitude
25 dismissed because he failed to allege the lack of availability of a choice and the complaint's 26 allegations showed in fact that he did have a choice and an opportunity to leave and that he chose to labor because he did not want his wife and children on the streets); Flood v. Kuhn, 316 F.Supp. 271, 281 (S.D.N.Y. 1970), aff'd 443 F.2d 264, 268 (2nd Cir. 1971) (baseball's reserve system did not constitute involuntary servitude because although plaintiff's choice not to play for Philadelphia would preclude him from playing baseball at all, it was nonetheless a choice).

1 Two-year statute of limitations for claims of involuntary servitude and peonage.

2 When a statute of limitations is not supplied by federal law, courts look to the most 3 analogous state statute to determine the limitations period. See North Star Steel Co. v. United 4 Steelworkers of America, 515 U.S. 29, 34, 115 S.Ct. 1927, 1930 (1995). Plaintiffs' claims for 5 peonage and involuntary servitude are claims for violations of their civil rights. The Supreme 6 Court has held that the statute of limitations period for the federal civil rights statutes is governed
7 by the state's limitation period for personal injury actions. See Wilson v. Garcia, 471 U.S. 261,
8 280, 105 S.Ct. 1938, 1949 (1985) (civil rights claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 governed by state
9 statutes of limitation for personal injury actions). The District of the Northern Mariana Islands
10 has been determined to be the proper forum³⁴ for this action and therefore the Commonwealth's
11 statute of limitations for personal injury claims applies: two years. 7 CMC § 2503.

14 _____
15 34

16 The case at hand originated in the Central District of California and was transferred to the 17 District of Hawaii pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a). The District of Hawaii then transferred the 18 case to this court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a). In its order granting transfer, the Hawaii court
19 stated that it was not bound by the rationale enunciated in the California court's transfer decision, 20 especially if it was clearly wrong or improper. See Order Granting . . . Transfer [of] the Entire 21 Case to the District Court for the Northern Mariana Islands, United States District Court for the 22 District of Hawaii, pg. 30, filed June 23, 2000. The Hawaii court disagreed with the California 23 court's reasoning for transfer to Hawaii and held that "it is necessary to transfer this case from 24 Hawaii, pursuant to § 1406(a), to a "district or division where it could have been brought." See 25 Id. at 29. According to the Hawaii court, the proper district for this case is the District for the 26 Northern Mariana Islands.

22 In determining whether the laws of the transferor or the transferee state apply to an action 23 that was transferred from one state to another, courts must distinguish between cases transferred 24 pursuant to § 1404(a) and § 1406(a). In § 1406(a) transfers, courts "apply the law of the 25 transferee court... ." Nelson v. International Paint Co., 716 F.2d 640, 642 (9th Cir. 1983). See
26 also Tel-Phonic Services, Inc. v. TBS Intern., Inc., 975 F.2d 1134, 1141(5th Cir. 1992) ("Following a section 1406(a) transfer, regardless of which party requested the transfer or the purpose behind the transfer, the transferee court must apply the choice of law rules of the state in which it sits.").

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25
26

COUNT 5 - VIOLATIONS OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

Plaintiffs are alleging the torts of forced labor and deprivation of fundamental human rights in violation of international law under the Alien Tort Claims Act (“ATCA”). 28 U.S.C. § 1350.

The ATCA provides that “[t]he district court shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action by an alien for a tort only in violation of the law of nations.” Id. In order for a tortious act to be actionable under the ATCA, it must be in violation of an international norm that is specific, obligatory, and universally condemned. Hilao v. Estate of Marcos, 103 F.3d 789, 794 (9th Cir. 1996). Defendants contend plaintiffs have failed to state a claim under the ATCA because a violation of international law requires a state actor and the claims are barred by the applicable statute of limitations. The court agrees as to the former assertion and need not consider the latter assertion.

Count 5 fails to state a claim for violations of international law

Although international law generally governs the relationship between nations, and thus a violation thereof almost always requires state action, it has been recognized that a handful of particularly egregious acts---genocide, war crimes, piracy, and slavery---by purely private actors can violate international law. As of now, however, only the acts mentioned above have been found to result in private individuals being held liable under international law. See Kadic v. Karadzic, 70 F.3d 232, 240 (2nd Cir. 1995); Doe v. Unocal Corp., 963 F.Supp. 880, 891 (C.D. Cal. 1997).

The court has above determined that plaintiffs have failed to make out a claim for the less egregious act of involuntary servitude and thus it need not consider whether the Unocal court’s

1 equation of forced labor with slavery is sustainable on the facts as alleged here. As to plaintiffs'
2 claims of other alleged human rights violations, no court has yet accepted plaintiffs' contention
3 that the freedom to associate and the right to be free from discrimination are standards that have 4 as yet evolved into norms of customary international law sufficient to invoke and be actionable
5 under the ATCA.
6

7 Statute of limitations for the ATCA

8 Plaintiffs contend that the statute of limitations period under the ATCA should be 9 premised on the limitations period of the most analogous federal law, the Torture Victim
10 Protection Act ("TVPA"), which is ten years. Defendants argue the limitations period should be 11 borrowed from the most analogous state law claim.
12

13 Because the court has determined that there is no claim under the ATCA, it need not 14 consider the question of the appropriate statute of limitations.

15 No dismissal under Fed.R.Civ.P. 41(b) for improper joinder

16 Defendants request that the complaint be dismissed for improper joinder. Fed.R.Civ.P.
17 20(a) permits joinder of defendants only if the alleged right to relief arises out of the same 18 transaction or series of transactions and if the claims present questions of law or fact common to 19 all defendants. Rule 21, however, states misjoinder is not a ground for dismissal and defendants'
20 motion is denied.
21
22
23 24
25
26

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25
26

CONCLUSION

Defendants' motion to dismiss is granted in part and denied as set out above.

(1) plaintiffs have adequately pleaded § 1962(c) association-in-fact enterprises consisting of individual retailer defendants and individual manufacturer defendants and the motion to dismiss is denied,

(2) a § 1962(c) enterprise consisting of all retailer defendants and all manufacturer defendants has not been sufficiently pleaded, defendants' motion to dismiss is granted, and plaintiffs may amend,

(3) plaintiffs' allegations of lost wages, excessive payments for employer-provided food and lodging, and actual payment of recruiter fees suffice to show "injury to property" for RICO purposes and the motion to dismiss is denied,

(4) plaintiffs' allegations that "deposits" paid to recruiters may not be returned upon the completion of their contracts are too speculative and are insufficient to show "injury to property" for RICO purposes, those claims are dismissed, and plaintiffs may amend if they are able to allege actual losses,

(5) plaintiffs lack standing to seek injunctive relief under RICO and that claim is dismissed with prejudice,

(6) plaintiffs have failed to allege an "investment injury" under § 1962(a), the motion to dismiss is granted, and plaintiffs may amend,

(7) plaintiffs have adequately alleged violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1581, the federal criminal peonage statute, and 18 U.S.C. § 1951, the "Hobbs Act," as "predicate acts" supporting a "pattern of racketeering activity" under RICO and the motion to dismiss is denied,

1 (8) plaintiffs have not adequately alleged violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1584, the federal
2 criminal involuntary servitude statute, as a “predicate act” supporting a “pattern of racketeering
3 activity” under RICO, the motion to dismiss is granted, and plaintiffs may amend,
4

5 (9) there is no aiding and abetting liability under RICO, defendants’ motion to dismiss is 6 granted, with prejudice,

7 (10) plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged that the retailer defendants’ participation in, or 8 conduct of, the affairs of an enterprise, defendants’ motion to dismiss is granted, and plaintiffs 9 are given leave to amend,

10 (11) plaintiffs have sufficiently pleaded a § 1962(d) conspiracy to violate § 1962(c) and 11 the motion to dismiss is denied,

12 (12) plaintiffs have failed to sufficiently allege a § 1962(d) conspiracy to violate 13 § 1962(a), defendants’ motion to dismiss is granted, and plaintiffs may amend, 14

15 (13) neither joint venture nor agency are sufficiently pleaded, defendants’ motion to 16 dismiss is granted, and plaintiffs may amend,

17 (14) civil aiding and abetting is not sufficiently pleaded, defendants’ motion to dismiss is 18 granted, and plaintiffs may amend,

19 (15) civil conspiracy is adequately pleaded,
20

21 (16) plaintiffs have not sufficiently pleaded a claim under the Anti-Peonage Act because 22 an allegation of “state action” is required to support such a claim, the claim is dismissed without 23 prejudice, and plaintiffs are given leave to amend,

24 (17) the Thirteenth Amendment does not provide a direct action for either involuntary 25 servitude or peonage and those claims are dismissed with prejudice, 26

1 (18) plaintiffs have not adequately alleged involuntary servitude as a predicate act
2 sufficient for RICO purposes, defendants' motion to dismiss is granted, and plaintiffs are granted
3 leave to amend,

4 (19) plaintiffs have adequately alleged a "compulsion to labor" common law peonage
5 claim and the motion to dismiss is denied,
6

7 (20) plaintiffs have adequately alleged a common law peonage claim against the retailer
8 defendants and the motion to dismiss is denied,

9 (21) plaintiffs common law involuntary servitude and peonage claims are subject to the 10 Commonwealth's two-year statute of limitations for personal injury actions,

11 (22) plaintiffs have failed to adequately allege a violation of international law and the 12 motion to dismiss is granted, with prejudice,
13

14 (23) defendants' motion to dismiss under Fed.R.Civ.P. 41(b) for improper joinder is 15 denied, and

16 (24) the court will exercise its supplemental jurisdiction over plaintiffs' common law 17 false imprisonment claims because they arise from the same common nucleus of operative facts.

18 Unless specifically ordered otherwise, all dismissals are without prejudice.

19 Plaintiffs are granted leave to amend consistent with this Order and shall have twenty 20

21
22
23 24
25
26

1 days from the date of this Order to file their second amended complaint. Defendants have twenty
2 days from the date of plaintiffs' filing of their amended complaint to answer or otherwise 3 respond.

4 IT IS SO ORDERED.

5 Dated this 29th day of October, 2001.
6
7
8

9
10 Alex R. Munson
11 Judge