25 Upon consideration of the written and oral arguments of counsel, plaintiffs' Motion for 26

1 Class Certification is GRANTED, defendants' Motion to Strike the Declaration of Arthur Miller 2 is DENIED, plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Approval of Settlements is GRANTED, and 3 plaintiffs' Motion for an Order Requiring Contractor Defendants to Post Notices of Proposed 4 Settlements is GRANTED.

6 DISCUSSION

7 I. Motion for Class Certification

8 Plaintiffs move the court to grant class certification pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a) and 9 23(b)(1), (b)(2), or (b)(3) for the following proposed class:

10 All persons other than Saipan resident citizens who, at any time since 11 January 13, 1989, have been employed on Saipan as factory garment
12 workers for one or more of the Contractor Defendants.

13 The threshold question before the court is whether the proposed class satisfies the 14 requirements of Rule 23(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Under Rule 23(a), "[o]ne or 15 more members of a class may sue or be sued as representative parties on behalf of all only if (1) 16 the class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable, (2) there are questions of 17 law or fact common to the class, (3) the claims or defenses of the representative parties are 18 typical of the claims or defenses of the class, and (4) the representative parties will fairly and 19 adequately protect the interests of the class." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a). In addition to meeting the 20 conditions imposed by Rule 23(a), the party seeking class certification must also show that the 21 action is maintainable under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1), (2), or (3).<sup>1</sup> The burden is on the party

23
24 <sup>1</sup>

25 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b) states:

1 seeking class certification to demonstrate that she has met the four requirements of Rule 23(a)
2 and at least one of the requirements of Rule 23(b). Zinser v. Accufix Research Institute, Inc., 3 253 F.3d 1180, 1186 (9th Cir. 2001). Before certifying a class, the trial court must conduct a 4 “rigorous analysis” to determine whether the party seeking certification has met the prerequisites 5 of Rule 23. Id. Furthermore, the trial court must pay “undiluted, even heightened, attention” to 6 class certification requirements in a settlement context. Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F.3d 7 1011, 1019 (9th Cir. 1998) (citing Amchem Products, Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591 (1997)).

10 An action may be maintained as a class action if the prerequisites of subdivision (a) are satisfied, and in addition:

11 (1) the prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of 12 the class would create a risk of 13 (A) inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class, or

14 (B) adjudications with respect to individual members of the class 15 which would as a practical matter be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the adjudications or substantially 16 impair or impede their ability to protect their interests; or

17 (2) the party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive 18 relief with respect to the class as a whole; or

19 (3) the court finds that the questions of law or fact common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual 20 members, and that a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy. The matters pertinent 21 to the findings include: (A) the interest of members of the class in individually controlling the prosecution or defense of separate actions; (B) 22 the extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy already commenced by or against members of the class; (C) the desirability or 23 undesirability of concentrating the litigation of the claims in the particular forum; and (D) the difficulties likely to be encountered in the management 24 of a class action.

1 While the trial court has broad discretion to certify a class, its discretion must be exercised 2 within the framework of Rule 23. Zinser, 253 F.3d at 1186.

3 A. Rule 23(a)

4 1. Rule 23(a)(1) - Numerosity

6 The prerequisite of numerosity is satisfied when “the class is so numerous that joinder of 7 all members is impracticable.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1). An estimated class of 30,000 members 8 consisting of all non-resident garment workers who, at any time since January 1989, were 9 employed by any of the Contractor Defendants, satisfies this requirement.

10 2. Rule 23(a)(2) - Commonality

11 12 Commonality is satisfied when it is shown that “there are questions of law or fact 13 common to the class.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2). This rule has been construed permissively.
14 Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1019 (9th Cir. 1998). “All questions of fact and law need not be common to 15 satisfy the rule. The existence of shared legal issues with divergent factual predicates is 16 sufficient, as is a common core of salient facts coupled with disparate legal remedies within the 17 class.” Id.

18
19 The plaintiffs have asserted that this is a class action suit challenging the garment 20 production system on Saipan, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (“CNMI”), based 21 upon allegations of peonage and involuntary servitude.<sup>2</sup> They have alleged a conspiracy by all

22
23 _____
24 <sup>2</sup>

25 The plaintiffs’ allegations of involuntary servitude were dismissed with prejudice 26 on this date. See Order Granting in Part and Denying in Part Customer Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss the Plaintiffs’ Second Amended Complaint, filed May 10, 2002, p. 33-37.

1 defendants to perpetuate this garment production system and to exploit the plaintiff class for 2 defendants' own profit. Plaintiffs further argued that there is commonality of law or fact in this 3 case because the conduct of the defendants and their agents will be the principal focus of both 4 sides' evidence based on the plaintiffs' alleged claim of conspiracy. The court agrees.

6 The defendants argued strenuously that commonality is not present because this is a case 7 involving different plaintiffs, with different factual backgrounds, working for different 8 employers, and allegedly suffering different injuries. Defendants further argued that the 9 plaintiffs' experiences regarding their allegations of voluntary hours, recruitment fees, threats, 10 housing and living conditions, and restrictions on freedom of movement vary greatly from 11 plaintiff to plaintiff. While the court acknowledges and agrees that there are disparate alleged 12 factual circumstances and injuries among the plaintiffs, these differences do not defeat the 13 court's certification of the plaintiff class at this time. The plaintiff Does' alleged injuries, 14 although different, all stem from the same alleged conspiracy amongst the defendants to 15 dominate and control the garment workforce of the Commonwealth. The Ninth Circuit has held 16 that in a civil-rights suit, "...commonality is satisfied where the lawsuit challenges a system-wide 17 practice or policy that affects all of the putative class members. In such circumstance, individual 18 factual differences among the individual litigants or groups of litigants will not preclude a 19 finding of commonality." Armstrong v. Davis, 275 F.3d 849, 868 (9th Cir. 2001). Thus, the 20 proposed class shares sufficient factual and legal commonality to satisfy the requirements of 21 Rule 23(a)(2).
22
23
24
25
26

1           3. Rule 23(a)(3) - Typicality

2           Rule 23(a)(3) requires that “claims or defenses of the representative parties [be] typical of 3 the claims or defenses of the class.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3). “The purpose of the typicality 4 requirement is to assure that the interest of the named representative aligns with the interests of 5 the class.” Hanon v. Dataproducts Corp., 976 F.2d 497, 508 (9th Cir. 1992). “Where the 6 challenged conduct is a policy or practice that affects all class members, the underlying issue 7 presented with respect to typicality is similar to that presented with respect to commonality, 8 although the emphasis may be different.” Armstrong, 275 F.3d at 869. The Ninth Circuit 9 “do[es] not insist that the named plaintiffs’ injuries be identical with those of the other class 10 members, only that the unnamed class members have injuries similar to those of the named 11 plaintiffs and that the injuries result from the same, injurious course of conduct.” Id. See Hanon, 12 976 F.2d at 508 (“The test of typicality is whether other members have the same or similar 13 injury, whether the action is based on conduct which is not unique to the named plaintiffs, and 14 whether other class members have been injured by the same course of conduct.”).

15           Defendants argued that there is no typicality because each plaintiff has highly 16 individualized factual circumstances with different injuries allegedly sustained and each plaintiff 17 is subject to a unique defense. As discussed supra, the court acknowledges and agrees that there 18 are disparate alleged factual circumstances and injuries among the plaintiffs, but these 19 differences still do not defeat the court’s certification of the plaintiff class at this time. The class 20 representatives are part of the same alleged work force allegedly created and sustained by 21 defendants’ conspiracy for defendants’ mutual benefit and profit. The class representatives’ 22
24
25
26

1 alleged injuries are similar to the class members and flow from the same alleged common 2 scheme, conspiracy, and course of conduct of the defendants. The plaintiffs argued, and the 3 court agrees, that although the injuries allegedly sustained by the class representatives are not 4 identical to the class members, they are similar in character because class representatives and 5 class members allegedly suffered economic and other damages, either directly and indirectly, as a 6 result of the defendants' alleged pattern of racketeering activity, conspiracy, and violation of 7 statutory, constitutional, and human rights. Thus, the claims of the representative parties are 8 typical of the claims of the class.

10 4. Rule 23(a)(4) - Adequacy

11 Rule 23(a)(4) requires that "the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect 12 the interests of the class." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4). Adequate representation "depends on the 13 qualifications of counsel for the representatives, an absence of antagonism, a sharing of interests 14 between representatives and absentees, and the unlikelihood that the suit is collusive." Brown v.
15 Ticor Title Insurance Co., 982 F.2d 386, 390 (9th Cir. 1992). "[A] class representative must be 16 part of the class and possess the same interest and suffer the same injury as the class members."
17 Amchem Products, Inc., 521 U.S. at 625-26 (1997). "Resolution of two questions determines 18 legal adequacy: (1) do the named plaintiffs and their counsel have any conflicts of interest with 19 other class members and (2) will the named plaintiffs and their counsel prosecute the action 20 vigorously on behalf of the class?" Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1020.

23 The defendants argued that there is inadequate representation because there are intra-class 24 conflicts of interests between current and former garment workers regarding the form of relief

1 and plaintiffs' counsel has a conflict of interest in representing the putative class because 2 plaintiffs' counsel represents the Union of Needletrades Industrial and Textile Employees 3 ("UNITE") in a California state action. Defendants contend that one of the goals of UNITE is to 4 rid Saipan of the non-unionized garment factories. This is directly at odds with the interests of 5 the Saipan garment factory workers. The defendants also argued that the Doe representatives do 6 not understand the lawsuit, they do not have a role in the decision-making process, and they have 7 insufficient knowledge of their duties and obligations in the lawsuit.

9 Plaintiffs contend that adequacy of representation is satisfied under the rule because there 10 are so many factual and legal issues common to the class that no conflict exists amongst the Doe 11 representatives and the class members. Plaintiffs argued that Rule 23(a)(4) requires "adequate," 12 not "perfect," representation. The named class representatives do not necessarily have to be 13 completely knowledgeable or have a firm understanding of all the factual or legal issues on 14 which the case rests. Relying on the depositions of the Doe representatives, plaintiffs argued that 15 the Doe representatives have a sufficient understanding that they are representing themselves and 16 other workers who have allegedly suffered injuries similar to their own, that this action is being 17 brought against most of the Saipan garment factories and the factories' retail customers, and that 18 the purpose of this lawsuit is to redress the alleged statutory, constitutional, and human rights 19 violations against all foreign garment workers. Finally, plaintiffs argued that their counsel are 20 highly experienced in prosecuting complex litigations, including class actions, and their 21 counsel's interests do not conflict with those of the putative class.
22
23
24

25 The court finds the plaintiffs' argument persuasive. The class representatives' complete 26

1 understanding of the legal basis for the class claims is not required by Rule 23(a)(4). See
2 Surowitz v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 383 U.S. 363, 366 (1966) (stating that class representative’s 3 complete understanding of the legal basis for the class action is not required by Rule 23). It is 4 enough that the representative Does exhibit an understanding of the purpose of this action and 5 that they share common interests with the absent class members. In this case, despite their lack 6 of formal education and knowledge of the English language and American legal system, the 7 representative Does exhibit an understanding that this action is for the protection of all foreign 8 garment workers on Saipan because it seeks to remedy the alleged abuses of the foreign garment 9 worker labor force. The Supreme Court has noted that “[t]he adequacy-of-representation 10 requirement tends to merge with the commonality and typicality criteria of Rule 23(a), which 11 serve as guideposts for determining whether maintenance of a class action is economical and 12 whether the named plaintiff’s claim and the class claims are so interrelated that the interests of 13 the class members will be fairly and adequately protected in their absence.” Amchem, 521 U.S.
14 at 626, n.20 (internal quotations and citation omitted). The court has previously noted supra that 15 the representative Does share “typical” claims and “common” legal and factual issues and 16 interests with the class members. Therefore, the representative Does are adequate 17 representatives who will protect the interests of the class. Next, there is no conflict between 18 current and former workers in the form of relief because as discussed supra, this is an action 19 seeking to remedy the alleged systematic abuses of the foreign garment workers in Saipan, not an 20 action for damages for unpaid wages. Finally, although defendants contend that plaintiffs’ 21 counsel operate under a conflict of interest, the record of this case, to date, does not contain any
23
24
25
26

1 evidence of any potential or actual conflict between plaintiffs' counsel and the class members. In 2 sum, there is no evidence that the individual judgment of plaintiffs' counsel has been overridden 3 by the interests of their client, UNITE.

4 B. Rule 23(b)

5 1. Rule 23(b)(1)

7 A class action is maintainable under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) if "prosecution of separate actions 8 would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members 9 of the class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the 10 class... ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A). The phrase "incompatible standards of conduct" refers to 11 the situation where "different results in separate actions would impair the opposing party's ability 12 to pursue a uniform course of conduct." Zinser, 253 F.3d at 1193 (citing 7A CHARLES A.
13 WRIGHT, ARTHUR R. MILLER & MARY K. KANE, FEDERAL PRACTICE & PROCEDURE, § 1773 at 14 431 (2d ed. 1986)). Rule 23(b)(1)(A) "...is applicable when practical necessity forces the 15 opposing party to act in the same manner toward the individual class members and thereby 16 makes inconsistent adjudications in separate actions unworkable or intolerable." In re 17 Teletronics Pacing Systems, Inc., 172 F.R.D. 271, 284 (S.D. Ohio 1997) (citing 7A CHARLES A.
18 WRIGHT, ARTHUR R. MILLER & MARY K. KANE, FEDERAL PRACTICE & PROCEDURE, § 1773 at 19 431 (2d ed. 1986)). Certification under this rule is not appropriate in an action for damages.
20 21 Zinser, 253 F.3d at 1193.
22

23 Defendants argued that Rule 23(b)(1)(A) certification is unavailable because the plaintiffs 24 cannot establish the requisite "risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications" on their claim for
26

1 injunctive relief and their action is predominately for monetary damages.

2 Plaintiffs argued that although they seek monetary damages, they also seek an injunction 3 establishing an independent monitoring program to prevent future violations of law by the 4 defendants. The monitoring program sought is identical for each defendant in that it holds all 5 defendants to the same standards of conduct in order to avoid the types of factory-by-factory, 6 worker-by-worker conflicts that Rule 23(b)(1)(A) seeks to avoid. According to the plaintiffs, 7 absent class action, the defendants would be faced with potentially numerous lawsuits which 8 could easily lead to conflicting injunctions that impose different standards of conduct, monitoring 9 programs, and remedial rules on the various defendants.
10

11 The court finds that certification under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) is proper in this case for the 12 reasons stated by the plaintiffs. Furthermore, while plaintiffs do seek monetary damages, it is 13 important to note that one of the fundamental reasons why they chose to litigate this case is to 14 establish an independent monitoring program of the garment production system in the CNMI.
15 This is evidenced by the pending settlement agreements between the plaintiffs and the 19 settling 16 defendants. The settlement agreements call for a monitoring program to which all the parties can 17 agree, and the agreements all include “a most favored nation clause”<sup>3</sup> which provides that any 18 future changes to the monitoring program will apply to all settling parties.
19 20

21 _____

23 “Most favored nations clause” is an unconditionally worded clause that prohibits 24 plaintiffs from making a later settlement with remaining defendants on terms more 25 favorable than settlement plaintiffs made with an early-settling defendant, without giving 26 early-settling defendant a refund to equalize the earlier and later settlements. Fisher Bros.
v. Phelps Dodge Industries, Inc., 614 F. Supp. 377 (E.D. Penn. 1985) aff'd, 791 F.2d 917 (3rd Cir. 1986).

1           2. Rule 23(b)(2)

2           Under Rule 23(b)(2), certification is proper when “the party opposing the class has acted 3 or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final 4 injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the class as a whole.” Fed. R.
5 Civ. P. 23(b)(2). Class certification under Rule 23(b)(2) “...is appropriate only where the primary 6 relief sought is declaratory or injunctive.” Zinser, 253 F.3d at 1195. A class seeking monetary 7 damages may be certified under this rule when such relief is “merely incidental to the primary 8 claim for injunctive relief.” Id.

9           Defendants argued that the Does’ request for injunctive relief (i.e. the monitoring 10 program) is “merely incidental” to the primary claim for money damages because the Does’ 11 damages claims depend more on the individual circumstances of each class member’s case than 12 on liability to the purported class as a whole. Defendants also argued that the relief sought by the 13 Doe representatives is inappropriate for class treatment because the putative class consists of 14 individuals alleging different injuries over a 13-year period of time, in 28 different factories that 15 have different policies, and all at the alleged direction of 22 different customer defendants.
16 Thus, the injunctive relief sought is not relief common and beneficial to the proposed class.

18           Plaintiffs argued that their injunction claims and requests for relief are the primary focus 19 of their case because they brought this action to end the defendants’ alleged wrongful conduct 20 and the alleged abusive conditions under which class members have been working. Plaintiffs 21 also argued that they have properly shown the defendants’ conduct to be “generally applicable to 22 the class” because the defendants’ alleged conspiracy to dominate and control the garment work 23
25
26

1 force on Saipan is and has been generally directed to all class members, even if not all class 2 members suffered the same injuries from the defendants' alleged concerted scheme. Next, 3 because the defendants' alleged wrongful conduct has general application to the entire class, all 4 class members will benefit from the requested relief – an industry-wide Code of Conduct and an 5 independent Monitoring Program. Finally, the plaintiffs argued in the alternative that if the court 6 finds that the plaintiffs' monetary claims are more than “incidental,” then the court may still 7 certify the claim for injunctive relief under Rule 23(c)(4)(A)<sup>4</sup> because that claim lends itself to 8 resolution on a class-wide basis.

10 The court recognizes that certification under Rule 23(b)(2) is a close call because there is 11 no bright line answer on whether the monetary relief sought in this action is “merely incidental” 12 to the primary claim for injunctive relief or whether the injunctive relief is “merely incidental” to 13 the primary claim for monetary damages. However, relying on the pleadings and in exercise of 14 its discretion under Rule 23, the court grants certification at this time under Rule 23(b)(2). See 15 discussion supra pp. 3-5; Zinser, 253 F.3d at 1186.
16

17 3. Rule 23(b)(3)

18 Pursuant to Rule 23(b)(3), a class must meet two requirements beyond the Rule 23(a) 19 prerequisites: Common questions of law or fact must “predominate over any question affecting

23 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(4)(A) states:

24 When appropriate (A) an action may be brought or maintained as a class action 25 with respect to particular issues...

1 only individual members;” and class resolution must be “superior to other available methods for 2 the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy.” Amchem, 521 U.S. at 615; Fed. R. Civ. P.
3 23(b)(3). Although they are interrelated, the court addresses these issues independently. Zinser, 4 253 F.3d at 1189.

6 a. Predominance

7 “Inherent in the satisfaction of the predominance test is the notion that the adjudication of 8 common issues will help achieve judicial economy.” Zinser, 253 F.3d at 1189 (citing Valentino 9 v. Carter-Wallace, Inc., 97 F.3d 1234 (9th Cir. 1996)). The predominance inquiry tests whether 10 the proposed classes are sufficiently cohesive to warrant adjudication by representation.
11 Amchem, 521 US. at 623. The Rule 23(b)(3) predominance criterion is far more demanding than 12 Rule 23(a)’s commonality requirement. Id. at 624. Thus, the presence of commonality alone is 13 insufficient to fulfill Rule 23(b)(3). Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1022.

15 The defendants argued that common issues do not “predominate” in this case because the 16 plaintiffs have not alleged a single claim that can be proven entirely with generalized proof that is 17 applicable to the class as a whole. The defendants also argued that at least one element of each 18 of the plaintiffs’ claims requires individualized proof and inquiry into the plaintiffs’ mental 19 states, alleged injuries, and causes of the alleged injuries. Furthermore, all the individualized 20 proof issues and the variances in the plaintiffs’ alleged experiences make it impossible to 21 calculate damages on a class-wide basis.

23
24 Plaintiffs argued that the overarching issue in this case is the defendants’ and their agents’ 25 alleged conspiracy to dominate the foreign garment work force of Saipan and deprive them of 1 their basic human rights and protections. As a result, the proof at trial will focus on common 2 issues of the defendants' conduct, not the class members. Plaintiffs contend that evidence of the 3 defendants' conspiracy and common course of conduct will be the basis for proving the elements

4 of the plaintiffs' Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), Alien Tort 5 Claims Act ("ATCA"), and Anti-Peonage Act claims,<sup>5</sup> RICO enterprises, predicate acts and 6 injuries, and compensatory, punitive and exemplary damages. Plaintiffs argued that because 7 these claims focus on the defendants' conduct, common questions predominate, regardless of 8 individual factual variances. Finally, plaintiffs argued that damages can be proven on an 9 aggregate basis without each class member presenting individual proof, and the court in this case 10 can use expert testimony, representative sampling, polling, and statistical analysis to prove facts 11 and damages.
12

14 The basic premise of the defendants is incorrect because the court does not find that the 15 main issues of this case require the separate adjudication of each class members' individual claim 16 or defense. As discussed in the "commonality" section above, this is a lawsuit challenging the 17 garment production system on Saipan based upon allegations of peonage, not a case involving 18 30,000 individual tort actions. The gravamen of plaintiffs' case is their claim of an alleged 19 conspiracy by all defendants to perpetuate this garment production system. Defendants argued 20 strenuously, to the point of over-intellectualizing their contention, that common questions of law

24 The plaintiffs' Anti-Peonage Act claims were dismissed with prejudice on this date.
25 See Order Granting in Part and Denying in Part Customer Defendants' Motion to Dismiss 26 the Plaintiffs' Second Amended Complaint, filed May 10, 2002, p. 40-42.

1 or fact do not predominate because individualized proof and inquiry into the plaintiffs' mental 2 states, alleged injuries, and causes of the alleged injuries will be needed to prove at least one
3 element of each of the plaintiffs' claims. As discussed supra, the court acknowledges and agrees 4 that there are disparate alleged factual circumstances and injuries among the Doe representatives 5 and the plaintiffs, but these differences do not defeat the court's certification of the plaintiff class
6 at this time. The plaintiff Does' alleged injuries, although different, all stem from the same 7 alleged conspiracy amongst the defendants to dominate and control the garment work force of 8 Saipan. The plaintiffs argued, and the court agrees, that they will need to present common 9 evidence to prove the defendants' alleged conspiracy and common course of conduct to prove 10 their RICO, ATCA and Anti-Peonage Act claims, RICO enterprises, predicate acts and injuries, 11 and compensatory, punitive and exemplary damages. Finally, just as the proof required to prove 12 the alleged conspiracy is class-wide, so is the evidence that will be used to show class-wide 13 economic and non-economic damages. The court finds plaintiffs' argument persuasive that 14 individual proof is not required from each class member and that damages can be proven by 15 using expert testimony, representative sampling, polling, and statistical analysis. These methods 16 provide for the fair distribution of monetary damages to the class members, if and when liability 17 is established, and protects all class members' due process rights. In conclusion, the court finds 18 that common questions predominate and certification of the class is proper at this time.

1                           b. Superiority

2                           In determining superiority, courts must consider the four factors of Rule 23(b)(3).<sup>6</sup> 3                           Zinser, 253 F.3d at 1190. “ A consideration of these factors requires the court to focus on the 4                           efficiency and economy elements of the class action so that cases allowed under subdivision
5                           (b)(3) are those that can be adjudicated most profitably on a representative basis.” Id. (citing 7A
6                           CHARLES A. WRIGHT, ARTHUR R. MILLER & MARY K. KANE, FEDERAL PRACTICE &
7                           PROCEDURE, § 1780 at 562 (2d ed. 1986)).

9                           Defendants contend that class action treatment of this case is inappropriate and 10                           unmanageable because there are numerous individual issues that affect each putative class 11                           member and each of these issues would have to be tried on an individual-by-individual basis.
12                           The potential 30,000 class members worked in twenty-eight different factories for numerous 13                           different departments and supervisors, at different times spanning a 13-year period. Defendants 14                           argued, therefore, that the aggregation of all garment workers in a single action will make matters
15                           of proof extremely difficult and unwieldy. Defendants also argued that there are reasonable 16                           alternatives to class certification. For example, the Fair Labor Standards Act (“FLSA”) action

---

19                           6

20                           The four factors are:

- 21                           (A) the interest of members of the class in individually controlling the 22                           prosecution or defense of separate actions;
- 23                           (B) the extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy 24                           already commenced by or against members of the class;
- 25                           (C) the desirability or undesirability of concentrating the litigation of the 26                           claims in the particular forum; and
- (D) the difficulties likely to be encountered in the management of a class action.

1 (Does I, et al. v. Advance Textile Corp., No. CV99-0002) presently before this court already 2 addresses the plaintiffs' wage-related complaints and workers have administrative remedies
3 through the CNMI Department of Labor and Immigration ("DOLI") available to them.

5 Plaintiffs argued that a class action is the only practicable means of resolving the class 6 members' claims in a fair, efficient, and manageable fashion because no reasonable alternative 7 methods of adjudicating this action are available. First, the court's resources will be burdened if 8 this action were to proceed as individual actions. Plaintiffs contend that the filing of thousands 9 of individual RICO, Anti-Peonage Act, ATCA, etc. claims will not provide plaintiffs with fair 10 and efficient justice because of the high risk of inconsistent and varying adjudications. Second, 11 plaintiffs argued that current and former garment workers who are not aware of the lawsuit will 12 be deprived of their day in court absent class certification. The putative class members' 13 resources are small compared to the factory and retailer defendants. In addition, the putative 14 class members' lack of formal education and knowledge of the English language, lack of 15 familiarity of the American legal system and the rights guaranteed by it, and their alleged fear of 16 retaliation by the defendants make it improbable that the putative class members would even 17 pursue individual actions. Finally, plaintiffs argued that the alternatives offer no possibility to 18 address and obtain relief for the alleged industry-wide conspiracy and defendants' common 19 course of conduct that give rise to the plaintiffs' RICO, Anti-Peonage Act, ATCA, and other 20 claims. Plaintiffs asserted that they will not be able to seek the injunctive relief of establishing a 21 monitoring program in the FLSA action because it is restricted solely to recovery of unpaid 22 overtime wages, and DOLI actions have a six month statute of limitations and has limited 23
25
26

1 jurisdiction over certain CNMI law claims.

2 The court agrees with the reasons stated by the plaintiffs why class action is superior to 3 other available methods for adjudicating this action. The alternatives to class action – thousands 4 of individual suits, the pending FLSA action, and DOLI administrative remedies – are not 5 reasonable alternatives for the putative class members. In conclusion, the court finds that a class 6 action is the superior method of adjudicating this action, and that class certification is proper at 7 this time.

9 C. Conclusion

10 Accordingly and for the foregoing reasons, the court GRANTS plaintiffs' Motion for 11 Class Certification. The court orders that the above captioned case be maintained as a class 12 action pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a) and 23(b)(3) on behalf of the following plaintiffs: 13

14 All persons other than Saipan resident citizens who, at any time since 15 January 13, 1989, have been employed on Saipan as factory garment
16 workers for one or more of the Contractor Defendants.

17 Subject to further order of this court, DOES I through XXV are designated as class 18 representatives. Any plaintiffs' and defendants' counsel seeking to serve as Lead Counsel shall 19 submit their curricula vitae to the court within 14 days of this order. The court will appointment 20 one Lead Class Counsel for plaintiffs and two Co-Lead Counsel for the defendants (i.e. one 21 counsel representing the retailer defendants and one counsel representing the manufacturer 22 defendants). The court will make its determination on this matter without oral argument.
23

24 This order is subject to alteration or amendment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c).
25
26

1 II. Motion to Strike the Declaration of Arthur Miller

2 Defendants move to strike Arthur Miller's declaration arguing that it was not filed with 3 plaintiffs' opening brief and therefore it raised new issues and facts in plaintiffs' reply. Plaintiffs 4 argued that there are no new facts or evidence raised in the Miller declaration because Professor 5 Miller only addressed issues presented in plaintiffs' opening and defendants' opposition briefs.
6 Plaintiffs also argued that the purpose of the Miller declaration was to rebut and respond to the 7 expert testimony rendered by George L. Priest submitted in support of defendants' opposition 8 memorandum. The court finds that the Miller declaration was timely filed and admitting the 9 declaration into the record will not prejudice any of the parties on this matter. Accordingly, 10 defendants' Motion to Strike the Declaration of Arthur Miller is DENIED.

13 III. Motion for Preliminary Approval of Settlements

14 Plaintiffs move the court to grant preliminary approval of the proposed settlements in this 15 action which resolve claims against 19 retailer defendants in three related lawsuits.<sup>7</sup> 16

17 <sup>7</sup>

18 The 19 Settling Defendants are: Brylane, L.P., Cutter & Buck, Inc., Donna Karan
19 International Inc., The Dress Barn, Inc., The Gymboree Corp., J. Crew Group, Inc., Jones
20 Apparel Group, Inc., Liz Claiborne, Inc., The May Department Stores Company, 21 Nordstrom, Inc., Oshkosh B'Gosh, Inc., Phillips-Van Heusen Corp., Polo Ralph Lauren 22 Corp., Sears Roebuck and Company, Tommy Hilfiger U.S.A., Inc., Warnaco Group, Inc., 23 Calvin Klein, Inc., Brooks Brothers, Inc., and Woolrich, Inc.

24 The three related lawsuits, which the court consolidated for purposes of settlement 25 (see discussion supra p. 2), are CV 01-0031 (Does I, et al. v. The Gap, Inc., et al.), CV 01-26 0036 (Does I, et al. v. Brylane, L.P., et al.), and CV01-0037 (Does I, et al. v. The Dress Barn, Inc.).

Settling Defendants, The Dress Barn, Inc. and J. Crew Group, Inc., both filed a Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Approval of Settlements.

1           A.       Procedural Posture

2           This putative class action was first filed on January 13, 1999, in the United States District
3 Court for the Central District of California. On September 29, 1999, the C. D. of California
4 transferred the case to the United States District Court for the District of Hawaii pursuant to 28
5 U.S.C. § 1404(a). On June 23, 2000, the Hawaii District transferred the case to this court 6 pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a). The Hawaii District’s order was subject to an appeal to the 7 United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, and the case was ultimately received by this 8 court on June 4, 2001. The plaintiffs, who comprise a putative class of potentially 30,000 foreign 9 garment workers who are or were employed in garment factories located in Saipan, CNMI, have 10 alleged that the defendants have violated RICO, ATCA, and the Anti-Peonage Act. The 11 plaintiffs challenge the garment production system in the CNMI as being based upon a system of 12 peonage, and contend that plaintiff foreign guest workers were forced to work under unlawful 13 “sweatshop” conditions. The class proposed by the plaintiffs, which the court certifies above 14 (see discussion supra Part I.A-B, pp. 3-20), is:

15                               All persons other than Saipan resident citizens who, at any time
16                               since January 13, 1989, have been employed on Saipan as a factory 17                               garment worker for one of more of the Contractor Defendants.

18           In the spring of 1999, initial settlement discussions began with two groups of defendants - 19 Group One: Cutter & Buck, Gymboree, Nordstrom and J. Crew and Group Two: Brylane, Donna
20 Karan International, Phillips-Van Heusen, and Polo Ralph Lauren. On August 6, 1999, the first 21

23 _____
24 Tommy Hilfiger U.S.A., Inc., Nordstrom, Inc., The Gymboree Corp., and Cutter & Buck, 25 Inc. all joined in J. Crew Group, Inc.’s Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs’ Motion for 26 Preliminary Approval of Settlements.

1 group of defendants reached a tentative settlement with the plaintiffs. Soon thereafter, the 2 plaintiffs reached an agreement with the second group of defendants. In mid-October 1999, the 3 plaintiffs reached an agreement with Dress Barn, and between November 1999 and March 2000, 4 the plaintiffs reached agreements with defendants Jones Apparel, May Co., Oshkosh, Sears and 5 Roebuck, Tommy Hilfiger, Warnaco, Liz Claiborne, and Calvin Klein. Since then, plaintiffs 6 have reached similar settlements with defendants Brooks Brothers and Woolrich. All of the 7 settlement agreements contain substantially the same terms, except for the amounts that the 8 settling defendants agreed to contribute to the settlement.

11 In agreeing to settle the action, the settling defendants have asserted that they never have, 12 nor do they now, engage in, support or condone unfair labor practices. The settling defendants 13 deny liability for any of the claims set forth in the Complaint against them. They assert that they 14 have agreed to settle the actions in order to avoid the substantial diversion of financial and 15 human resources inherent in the litigation process, irrespective of the outcome which they 16 believe, in this case, would be favorable to them.
17

18 The proposed settlements have four main elements: (1) a requirement that the settling 19 retailer defendants include a specified code of conduct - "CNMI Monitoring Standards" - in all 20 future contracts with CNMI garment suppliers, which the suppliers must accept and follow as a 21 condition of obtaining new business from the settling defendant; (2) establishment of a system of 22 independent workplace and living quarters monitoring, under the auspices of an independent, 23
24
25
26

1 non-profit international Monitoring Body,<sup>8</sup> to ensure that all terms of the CNMI Monitoring 2 Standards are fully satisfied; (3) establishment of a Settlement Fund to fund the Monitoring 3 Program and Monitoring Body and to compensate the settlement class members for the harms 4 alleged in the complaints (10% of the Settlement Fund will be contributed to a cy pres fund that 5 will be administered by the non-profit Tides Foundation, to further the goals of the California 6 state actions<sup>9</sup>); and (4) payment of plaintiffs' costs and attorneys fees and the administrative costs 7 of notifying the class and implementing the proposed settlements.

9 The plaintiffs now come before the court and request an order granting preliminary 10 approval of the settlements. Plaintiffs also request provisional certification of the following 11 "Settlement Class":
12

13 All persons other than CNMI resident citizens who, at any time 14 between January 13, 1989 and the [date of Federal Court's provisional 15 certification] were or have been employed in the CNMI as a garment
16 factory worker for one of more CNMI Contractors or CNMI
Subcontractors . . . that manufactures or have manufactured garments

18 Pursuant to the proposed Monitoring Program, the independent Monitoring Body 19 will be the Massachusetts-based non-profit organization, Verification in Trade and Export ("Verité").

21 The California state actions are two actions resting on similar underpinnings that 22 are pending in the California Superior Court in San Francisco: Union of Needletrades
23 Indus. and Textile Employees, AFL-CIO v. The Gap, Inc. and Union of Needletrades 24 Indus. and Textile Employees, AFL-CIO v. Brylane, L.P.. The state actions allege, inter
25 alia, that defendant retailers misled the public and falsely advertised that their Saipan-26 manufactured garments were "sweatshop free" and manufactured in full compliance with all applicable labor laws. Pursuant to the Proposed Settlements, the claims against the settling defendants in those cases will be dismissed voluntarily, and 10% of the settlement fund created by the parties' Proposed Settlements will be devoted to cy pres measures consistent with the goals of the pending California state actions.

1 for the Company or for [any of the Settling Defendants] or for any U.S.
2 mainland retailer or apparel company that is or has been a party 3 [named in this action, one of two similar State actions or an action filed in the U.S. District Court in Saipan<sup>10</sup>].

4 The “Settlement Class” shall consist of all members of the Provisional Class who do not opt out 5 of the settlements.

6 B. The Proposed Settlements are Fair, Adequate, and Reasonable and are 7 Preliminarily Approved Until the Court Conducts the Fairness Hearing

8 Rule 23(e) of the Fed. R. Civ. P. requires federal district courts to approve all settlements 9 of class actions.<sup>11</sup> See Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 726 (1986). This rule also “requires the 10 district court to determine whether a proposed settlement is fundamentally fair, adequate, and 11 reasonable.” Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1026. The Ninth Circuit provides factors that a district court 12 must balance in assessing the fairness, adequacy, and reasonableness of a settlement proposal: 13

14 the risk, expense, complexity, and likely duration of further litigation; the risk of 15 maintaining class action status throughout the trial; the amount offered in settlement; 16 the extent of discovery completed and the stage of the proceedings; the experience 17 and views of counsel; the presence of a governmental participant; and the reaction of the class members to the proposed settlement. Id. (internal citation omitted).

2 counsel, the vigor with which the case was prosecuted, and the coercion or collusion that may 3 have marred the negotiations themselves . . . . So long as the integrity of the arm's length 4 negotiation process is preserved . . . a strong initial presumption of fairness attaches to the 5 proposed settlement.”) (internal citations and quotations omitted); In re NASDAQ Market-6 Makers Antitrust Litigation, 1997 WL 805062, *8 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 31, 1997) (“Where the 7 proposed settlement appears to be the product of serious, informed, non-collusive negotiations, 8 has no obvious deficiencies, does not improperly grant preferential treatment to class 9 representatives or segments of the class and falls within the range of possible approval, 10 preliminary approval should be granted.”) (citing MANUAL FOR COMPLEX LITIGATION § 30.41

12 fairness. Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1026. “[T]he decision to approve or reject a settlement is 14 their strategies, positions and proof.” Id. (internal quotation and citation omitted).

15
17

18 The court conducts a two-step process in determining whether to approve a class action 19 settlement. First, the court makes a preliminary fairness evaluation of the proposed settlement.
20 Cope v. Duggins, 2001 WL 333102, *1 (E.D. La. April 4, 2001) (citing MANUAL FOR COMPLEX 21 LITIGATION § 30.41 (3rd ed. 1995)). This preliminary hearing, conducted either before the court 22 or upon written briefs, is held to evaluate the likelihood that the court would approve the 23 settlement during its second review stage, the full fairness hearing. Id. See also In re Holocaust

1 and class certification allowed for the implementation of the second step in the settlement
2 evaluation process – dissemination of notice. . . . The final step in the class action settlement
3 evaluation process is a final approval hearing, which is also known as a “fairness hearing.”); In re 4 NASDAQ Market-Makers Antitrust Litigation, 1997 WL 805062 at *8 (stating that “[o]nce 5 preliminary approval is granted, the second step of the process ensues: notice of a hearing is 6 given to class members . . . at which time class members and the settling parties may be heard 7 with respect to final court approval.”) (citing MANUAL FOR COMPLEX LITIGATION § 30.41 (3rd ed.
8 1995)). During the preliminary evaluation, the court will examine the submitted materials and 9 determine whether the proposed settlement appears fair on its face. Cope, 2001 WL 333102 at 10 *1.

13 Non-settling defendants argued that the proposed settlements are unfair and inadequate 14 for the following reasons: First, defendants contend that the selection of Verité as the monitor of 15 factory conditions renders the monitoring program unfair to the non-settling defendants because 16 Verité will not act as a neutral and impartial body. An article published on the Verité web site 17 publicly disparaged factory conditions in Saipan and stated that workers are held in a state of 18 bondage. Defendants argued that designating Verité as the monitor in the proposed monitoring 19 program would vest unlimited discretion in Verité to reach unsupported conclusions about a 20 factory’s compliance and ultimately put the factory out of business. Second, the defendants 21 argued that the proposed settlements highlight conflicts of interests within the proposed class, 22 between the proposed class and its representatives, and between the proposed class and its 23 counsel. See discussion supra Part I.A.3-4, pp. 7-11. Third, the defendants contend that the cy
26

1 pres fund created by the proposed settlements is unfair and unreasonable because it diverts
2 settlement funds to non-parties which should be going to class members. The cy pres fund 3 furthers the purposes of cases not before this court and none of the putative class members are 4 plaintiffs in those actions. Fourth and finally, the defendants assert that the opt-out notice to 5 class members proposed by the plaintiffs is inadequate because it leaves class members without 6 effective notice. Defendants contend that the plaintiffs do not show that class members would 7 understand and appreciate a notice regarding U.S. class action litigation, even if it were translated 8 in their native tongue, that there is no reason to believe that the defendants' records of the "last 9 known address" of former garment worker class members are reliable, and that there is no basis
10 to believe that the postal systems of China, Bangladesh, and the other Asian countries are reliable 11 enough to ensure that notice would actually reach the addressees.
12

14 Plaintiffs assert that the proposed settlements are fair and beneficial to the settlement 15 class and meet the standard for preliminary approval. Plaintiffs contend that the proposed 16 settlements were carefully negotiated between informed and experienced counsel on both sides 17 and in some instances between counsel and settling defendants' President, CEO or high-level 18 production personnel, and were designed to address the issues raised by the plaintiffs in their 19 complaint. To wit, the proposed settlements: (1) address the recruitment fee problem; (2) 20 establish standards for regulating the living and working conditions of the garment workers; (3)
21 fund an ongoing Monitoring Body to ensure compliance with those standards; (4) designate 10%
22 of the Settlement Fund to be used for cy pres purposes consistent with the goals of the California 23 state actions; and (5) establish a fund to be distributed on a per capita basis to the class members
26

1 who do not opt-out of the proposed settlements.<sup>12</sup> According to the plaintiffs, the proposed 2 settlements eliminate the risk that the class might not otherwise recover because the settlements 3 take into account the risks involved in this litigation, including the potential difficulties of 4 obtaining class certification, overcoming defendants' pending Motion to Dismiss,<sup>13</sup> and proving 5 class members' claims on the merits against both the contractor and retailer defendants. In 6 regards to the proposed notices for the class members, plaintiffs maintain that the notices 7 describe in sufficient detail the terms and provisions of the proposed settlements to allow class 8 members to timely make an informed choice about whether to accept the proposed settlements.

11 Certain settling defendants,<sup>14</sup> in support of preliminary settlement approval, argued that 12 the non-settling defendants should not be permitted to deny the settling defendants the benefit of 13 their bargain. They also argued that the proposed settlements are fair and reasonable because 14 they establish a monitoring program that enforces and verifies compliance with applicable 15 CNMI and federal laws, the settlements compensate class members, and do not impose any

26 Settling Defendants, The Dress Barn, Inc. and J. Crew Group, Inc., both filed a Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Approval of Settlements.
Tommy Hilfiger U.S.A., Inc., Nordstrom, Inc., The Gymboree Corp., and Cutter & Buck,
Inc. all joined in J. Crew Group, Inc.'s Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Approval of Settlements.

1 requirements on the non-settling defendants, unless they choose to do business with the settling 2 defendants.

3           The court finds that the proposed settlements are sufficiently fair, adequate, and 4 reasonable for the following reasons: First, there is no evidence to indicate that the proposed 5 settlements were negotiated in haste or in the absence of information. In fact, the settlement 6 negotiations began more than three years ago, and the proposed settlements were revised more 7 than a dozen times before the settlement agreements were finalized and submitted to the court.
8 Second, the settlement agreements were entered into in good faith, after careful arm's-length 9 negotiations between experienced and informed counsel on both sides and in several instances 10 with plaintiffs' counsel and settling defendants' President, CEO or high-level production 11 personnel, and negotiations took more than a year. Third, the court finds that defendants' 12 allegations against Verité are unsupported by the record because nothing in the record indicates 13 that Verité as the monitor would jeopardize the factory and retailer defendants' businesses. In 14 fact, built into the settlement agreements are checks and controls on the conduct of the monitor 15 and a provision allowing the parties to select a monitoring body other than Verité. See Hasegawa
16 Decl., Ex. A: Proposed Settlement Agreement of J. Crew Group, Inc., at pp. 38-42, Part III.1-11
17 and p. 34, Part I.1.d. Next, the court finds that there is no conflict among the settlement class and 18 plaintiffs' counsel, and that the settlement class' counsel are experienced plaintiffs' advocates 19 and class action lawyers. Finally, there is no evidence in the record of collusion. The proposed 20 settlements do not favor the class representatives or any segment of the class. Thus, the court 21 finds that the proposed settlement agreements are the result of serious arm's-length negotiation 22
24

1 and are sufficiently fair for preliminary approval.

2 C. The Proposed Settlement Class is Certifiable Under Rule 23(a) and 23(b)(3)

3 Defendants argued that the proposed settlement class cannot be certified under Rule 23(a) 4 and (b) for the same reasons they objected to plaintiffs' Motion for Class Certification. See 5 discussion supra Part I.A-B, pp. 3-20. Plaintiffs argued to the contrary and contend that Rule 6 23(a)'s numerosity, commonality, typicality, and adequacy, and Rule 23(b)(3)'s predominance 7 and superiority requirements have all been met. Plaintiffs also argued that the court need not 8 engage in a "full-blown" class certification analysis for purposes of preliminary settlement 9 approval.
10

12 The court will not repeat its Rule 23(a) and (b) analysis nor discuss plaintiffs' contention 13 that a "full-blown" class certification analysis is not required for purposes of this motion because 14 the court has previously ruled that class certification is proper at this time. See discussion supra 15 Part I.A-B, pp. 3-20.

16 D. Non-Settling Defendants Lack Standing to Object to the Proposed 17 Settlements

18 Plaintiffs contend that the non-settling defendants lack standing to challenge their co-19 defendants' settlements. The court agrees. The Ninth Circuit in Waller v. Financial Corp. of 20 America, 828 F.2d 579, 582 (9th Cir. 1987), addressed the issue of when, if ever, a defendant has 21 standing to object to a settlement involving other parties to a lawsuit. The court held that in 22 general, a non-settling defendant lacks standing to object to a partial settlement. Id. However, 23 the Ninth Circuit noted that "[t]here is a recognized exception to the general principle barring 24

1 objections by non-settling defendants to permit a non-settling defendant to object where it can 2 demonstrate that it will sustain some formal legal prejudice as a result of the settlement.” Id. at 3 583. Basically, a non-settling defendant has standing to object to a partial settlement which 4 purports to strip it of a legal right, claim or defense. Id.

6 Non-settling defendants argued, without avail, that they will be prejudiced if the court 7 grants plaintiffs’ motion for preliminary approval of the proposed settlements without a formal 8 hearing on class certification. If notices are sent to the class, they maintain, plaintiffs’ counsel 9 will be given a head start in recruiting workers to file individual claims in the event that the court
10 ultimately determines that class certification is not appropriate. This argument fails because it 11 has been mooted by the court’s scheduling of the Motion for Class Certification and Motion for 12 Preliminary Approval of Settlements on the same date. Defendants also argued that they are 13 “adversely affected”<sup>15</sup> by the plaintiffs’ selection of Verité as the monitor under the settlement 14 agreements because of Verité’s documented bias against Saipan garment factories. This bias 15 threatens the garment factories’ ability to obtain future business and jeopardizes both the 16 businesses of the manufacturer defendants and Saipan as a source of quality garments for the 17 retailer defendants. The defendants’ argument of being “adversely affected” by the proposed 18 settlements is without merit because it does not amount to the requisite legal prejudice required

22 15

23 Defendants cite to McAllen Medical Center, Inc. v. Cortez, 66 S.W.3d 227 (Tex.
24 2001), for the proposition that “a non-settling defendant has standing to contest 25 certification of a settlement class if the non-settling defendant can show that the 26 certification adversely affects it.” The court has read and considered McAllen but the decision has no precedential value in the Ninth Circuit.

1 by the Ninth Circuit in Waller. In sum, the non-settling defendants lack standing to object to the 2 proposed settlements between the plaintiffs and the 19 settling defendants.

3 E. Conclusion

4 In conclusion, the court finds that the proposed settlements are sufficiently fair, adequate, 5 and reasonable, justifying notice to the settlement class for an opportunity to be heard.

6 Accordingly and for the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Approval of 7 Settlements is hereby GRANTED. The court further ORDERS that plaintiffs' proposed 8 published/posted and mailed Notices of the Proposed Settlements are approved.<sup>16</sup> All litigation 9 of the settled claims against the settling defendants is hereby stayed and enjoined pending the 10 Fairness Hearing. The procedures and timing for the filing of objections and requests for 11 exclusion regarding the Proposed Settlements are as follows: 12

14 (1) Notice of the Proposed Settlements shall be by publication to all settlement class 15 members within 20 days of the date of this order. This will be done by first-class mail to all 16 settlement class members whose addresses have been or can be reasonably ascertained through 17 discovery and other means, and by posting in the workplace.<sup>17</sup> For current workers on Saipan, 26 to Post Notices of Proposed Settlements infra Part IV, pp. 35-38.

1 Notice will be distributed to them personally at the contractor defendants' factories during 2 paycheck distribution time. Each factory worker is required to sign a receipt acknowledging their 3 receipt of the Notice.

5 (2) All settlement class members have the right to submit objections and/or requests 6 for exclusion. The last day to file objections or request for exclusion is 120 days after the 7 Notices are sent.

8 (3) Publication Notice will be provided within 20 days of the date of this order to 9 settlement class members through publication of the English-language Notice and the Notice 10 translated into the Chinese, Filipino, Thai, Korean, Bangladeshi, and Vietnamese languages for 11 no fewer than four (4) days (i.e. published one day a week for four (4) weeks) in daily 12 newspapers of general circulation in Saipan, China, Thailand, Bangladesh, Korea, Vietnam, and 13 the Philippines.

14
15 (4) The posting of the publication Notice, translated in the specified languages, in 16 appropriate and accessible locations at the contractor defendants' places of business shall occur
17 within 10 days of the date of this order and the Notice will remain posted for at least 30
18 consecutive days. The court deems the contractor defendants' factories and company-controlled 19 living quarters and eating facilities as appropriate and accessible locations to post the Notices.
20 Each contractor defendant is required to file an affidavit with this court confirming that the 21 Notices have been posted as required by this order within 10 days of posting.

23 (5) The Fairness Hearing will be conducted 28 days after the expiration of the 120 24 day period for filing requests for exclusion and objections to the settlements. Counsel for 25

1 plaintiffs shall schedule the hearing.

2 IV. Motion for an Order Requiring Contractor Defendants to Post Notices of Proposed
3 Settlements

4 Plaintiffs move the court to issue an order: (1) finding that their proposed Notices are fair 5 and reasonable; (2) requiring the proposed Notice forms to be distributed personally to each 6 worker at paycheck distribution time, and requiring each worker to sign a receipt for same; or, 7 alternatively or in addition, requiring each contractor defendant to post Notice of the proposed 8 settlement in an appropriate and accessible location and in appropriate languages at the 9 contractor defendants' factories; and (3) ordering the parties to promptly meet to resolve any 10 differences regarding the best practical means of distributing the Notice, and report back to the 11 court within 5 days thereafter with a proposal regarding Notice distribution.

12
13 Rule 23(c)(2) of the Fed. R. Civ. P. provides that if a court determines that an action 14 should be maintained as a Rule 23(b)(3) class action, "the court shall direct to the members of the 15 class the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all 16 members who can be identified though reasonable effort." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2). Rule 17 23(d)(2) further provides that a court has authority to "make appropriate orders ... requiring, for 18 the protection of the members of the class or otherwise for the fair conduct of the action, that 19 notice be given in such manner as the court may direct to some or all of the members of any step 20 in the action ...." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(2). "...[N]otice of [a] proposed ... compromise shall be 21 given to all members of the class in such a manner as the court directs." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).

24 Defendants oppose the posting of Notice on their property arguing that they are not 25
26

1 parties to the proposed settlements and the posting of the Notices on their personal property 2 would create a bias in favor of the plaintiffs because the Notices create an impression of 3 wrongdoing by those factories required to post them. Defendants further argued that they should 4 not have to bear the plaintiffs' burden of effecting notice on class members, and that any 5 requirement of posting on defendants' property should be by consensual agreement among the 6 parties, and not pursuant to a court order.

8 Plaintiffs argued that, in this case, the court should order that the distribution of notice be 9 conducted in the same manner it ordered the parties to distribute the Hoffman-LaRoche notice in 10 Does I, et al. v. Advance Textile Corp., No. CV99-0002 (the "FLSA Action"). In the FLSA 11 action, this court ordered that notice be distributed in the factories by personal delivery of notice 12 to workers along with their paychecks. Plaintiffs contend that this distribution method does not 13 involve any costs to defendants, will not disrupt regular business operations, and the content-14 neutral notice will not prejudice defendants in any way. Plaintiffs argued that without the 15 cooperation of the contractor defendants, no adequate notice can be given to current garment 16 workers, as defendants maintain exclusive control over their factories and most, if not all, of the 17 current workers do not have personal mailboxes and mainly receive mail through use of their 18 factory employers' mailbox. Finally, plaintiffs argued that the posting of notice on defendants' 19 property is a legally-proper method of notice to the class.

22 Relying on the pleadings and in exercise of its discretion under Rule 23, the court 23 GRANTS plaintiffs' Motion for an Order Requiring Contractor Defendants to Post Notices of 24

1 Proposed Settlements. The court finds that the proposed Notices<sup>18</sup> are fair and reasonable 2 because they describe the nature of this action, identify the settling defendants, define the 3 settlement class, and inform the settlement class members of their possible entitlement to 4 monetary payments under the proposed settlements, their right to attend the Fairness Hearing, 5 and their rights to object to or opt-out of the proposed settlements. The proposed Notices allow 6 class members to make an informed choice whether to accept the proposed settlements. Finally, 7 posting the Notice of the proposed settlements at the contractor defendants' factories will neither 8 burden nor prejudice the defendants. The court further ORDERS that:<sup>19</sup>

10 (1) Notice of the Proposed Settlements shall be by publication to all settlement class 11 members within 20 days of the date of this order. For current workers on Saipan, Notice will be 12 distributed to them personally at the contractor defendants' factories during paycheck distribution 13 time. Plaintiffs' counsel will deliver the Notices to the appropriate factory personnel or 14 department not less than five (5) days before the scheduled paycheck distribution. Each factory 15 worker is required to sign a receipt acknowledging their receipt of the Notice.
